(4) Nothing in this Article shall be deemed to prevent any person from being prosecuted under any other law for any act or omission punishable under this Article, or from being liable under that other law to any higher punishment or penalty than that provided by this Article. Provided that no person shall be punished twice for the same offence.

Rainfall Summary for the seven days ending at 8 hrs. on Thursday, the 7th May 1914, based on the Indian Daily Weather Reports of the period.

1. The rainfall of the week was associated chiefly with thunderstorms, which were unusually numerous in the central parts of the country and the Peninsula. Easterly winds from the Bay penetrated into the Punjab and gave some rain along the western Himalayas.

2. Burma.—Rain fell at most stations in Lower Burma, and at a few places in Upper Burma.

Northeast India, including Orissa.—Rainfall occurred practically everywhere, except in Bihar; on the 6th it was nearly general in Assam and Chota Nagpur, and fairly general in Bengal and Orissa.

The United Provinces, Central India and the Central Provinces.—Thunderstorms gave local falls of rain in all parts of the division; they were most numerous in the United Provinces on the 4th, and in the Central Provinces on the 6th.

Northwest India.—Rain fell at Simla, Ambala, Ludhiana, Khushab, Parachinar, Mount Abu, Jaipur, Kotah, Udaipur and Ahmadabad.

The Peninsula.—Thunderstorms were reported on every day of the week, and were most numerous on the 5th. They were nearly general in Hyderabad on the 3rd May, in the Madras Deccan on the 30th April, and 3rd and 5th May, and in Mysore on the 3rd May. Heavy rain fell in south Malabar on the 6th.

4. The week's rainfall was 20 per cent or more in excess over the greater part of the country. No rain fell in Sind and Rajputana West, but the absence of rainfall in these areas is a normal feature of the weather at this time of year. Rainfall was 20 per cent or more in defect in the Bay Islands, Burma, Bihar, Chota Nagpur, Kashmir, the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan and Madras Southeast; and differed from the normal by less than 20 per cent in Assam, Bengal, the United Provinces West, and the Punjab. In all the remaining divisions it was 20 per cent or more in excess.

A new rainfall period begins with this week, and the departures from normal for the period are hence identical with those for the week.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 2nd May 1914.

Burma.—Rain fell in nineteen districts. Harvesting of spring rice and ploughing for autumn rice are proceeding normally. Standing crops are satisfactory. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon is unchanged. Pasturage is ample. The health of cattle is good.

Assam.—The weather was rainy. The recent rain has retarded agricultural operations in many places especially in the lower and central districts of the Assam Valley. It has also caused slight damage to spring rice which is now being harvested in Sylhet. Hoeing and plucking of tea, ploughing for and sowing of early and winter rice and jute and planting of sugarcane still continue. Prospects of tea are good and those of other crops fair. The average price of common rice has risen by about two per cent. Cattle disease is reported from six districts.

Bengal.—During the week rain fell throughout the Province accompanied in some places by hail and high winds. A certain amount of damage has been done to summer paddy but the young autumn crops have not suffered to any appreciable extent. Harvesting of summer rice and other spring crops is approaching completion. Sowings of winter rice, jute and other autumn crops are proceeding. Weeding of jute and autumn rice has commenced in places. Cattle disease is reported from thirteen districts. The average price of common rice has risen by about one per cent as compared with that of the previous week.

Bihar and Orissa.—Light rainfall was general in Orissa ; in the rest of the Province it was scattered. Threshing of spring crops and planting of sugarcane still continue in some districts. Preparation of lands for the next season's crops is going on. Sowing of jute is in progress in Purnea. The newly planted sugarcane crop and other standing crops are doing well. The average price of common rice has fallen slightly as compared with that of the previous week. The supply of fodder and water is generally sufficient. Cattle disease is reported from twelve districts. Agricultural prospects in the Feudatory States of Orissa are on the whole good.

United Provinces.—Rain has fallen in the Himalayan, Lower Doab and the eastern districts and in the Tehri State. Threshing and winnowing of spring crops are almost complete. Irrigation and weeding of extra crops, hoeing of sugarcane and opium weighments are in progress. Preparation of land for autumn crops continues. Cattle disease is reported to be spreading. Scarcity of fodder continues but Government hay is being taken freely for agricultural cattle which are in fairly good condition. Prices are generally stationary with a slight downward tendency.

The weekly report on the famine and scarcity is as follows:—Rain has fallen in Budaun and in the Lower Doab and Bundelkhand districts. Relief works are in progress in Jalaun, Hamirpur and Banda, civil works in Etawah and in the Haburah settlement in Moradabad, test works in Moradabad and Jhansi, aided works in Moradabad, Budaun, Shahjahanpur, Fatehpur, Allahabad, Jalaun, Jhansi, Hamirpur and Banda and unaided private works in Moradabad, Agra, Budaun, Jalaun, Jhansi, Hamirpur and Banda. Grand total 46,948. Takavi is being distributed for wells. The numbers on relief works in Bundelkhand have fallen owing to extreme heat and in Etawah partly owing to migration of people from their villages. The public health is generally good. No increase in mortality is reported. Crime shows an increase in two districts and is normal elsewhere. Little wandering or emaciation is noticed. Migration on a small scale continues except in Etawah where many villages have been practically depopulated. Cattle are reported to be deteriorating in famine districts where disease and mortality among them is increasing. Clothing is being distributed to the poor and needy and cash doles are being given to indigent and respectable people and to parda nashin women from charitable funds. Fodder is still scarce in the distressed area and in Etawah on account of transport difficulties. There is little hope of being able to save the cattle of the poorest cultivators. Water is deficient in the famine area. Markets are well stocked except in Etawah where the stock is low and the supply of food grains in the affected tracts is rapidly failing. Special arrangements are being made there for importation. The price basis is from 9½ to 13 seers per rupee.

Punjab.—The weather was generally hot and clear. Harvesting of spring crops continues in some districts and the yield is normal to good except on unirrigated areas of the south-east where it is poor. Prices of food grains are high and generally stationary but have a tendency to fall in Peshawar. The price of maize is rising in Peshawar.

Jammu.—Slight rain fell in some parts of the Province. Prices are fluctuating. Wheat sells from 10 to 12 and maize from 12 to 18 seers per rupee. The condition of standing crops is good. There is no disease among cattle. Fodder is almost sufficient.

Kashmir.—No rain fell during the week except insignificant rain in the Uttarmachipura tahsil. Standing crops are in good condition and prospects are fair. No damage has been done to crops. Prices of grain have a tendency to rise in the Uttarmachipura and Baramula tahsils and are normal elsewhere. Fodder and water are sufficient.

Rajputana.—Slight showers of rain fell in Udaipur and Jhalrapatan. The weather is generally hot and clear. Harvesting of spring crops has been completed in most places. Land is being prepared for sowings of autumn crops in Dungarpur, Kotah, Karauli and Ajmer-Merwara. Rain is insufficient in the northern parts of Gwalior, Bundelkhand and in the Rampura, Bhanpura and Alampur perganas of Indore. Reaping of spring crops is in progress generally. Preparation of land for autumn crops is in progress in the southern States. Standing crops are bad in the northern parts of Gwalior, in Bundelkhand and in the Alampur pergana of Indore, fair in Bhopal and good elsewhere. Crops have been damaged in the Alampur pergana of Indore and in Baghelkhand. Cattle disease prevails in parts of Gwalior, Indore, Bhopal, Baghelkhand, Bundelkhand and Malwa. The fodder supply is bad in the northern parts of Gwalior and Bundelkhand and in the Alampur pergana of Indore and indifferent in Baghelkhand. Prices are rising in Bhopal, Baghelkhand and in parts of Bundelkhand and are steady elsewhere. The numbers on test works were :—Panna 1,904, Baoni 45, Chhatarpur 372, Sarila 180, Tori Fatehpur 20, Jigni 304, Lughasi 82, Bihat 52, Beri 78, Naigawan Rebai 24, Bilheri 232, Bijawar 692, Samthar 453, Charkhari 634, Ajaigarh 271, Banka Pahari 48, Alipura 24 and Orchha of Bundelkhand 4,878.

Central Provinces.—The weather has been hot and cloudy with high winds. Eleven districts received rain, varying from 1½ inches to a few cents. Threshing and winnowing are almost completed. Construction of field embankments and ploughing of land for the ensuing season's crops are in full swing. Fodder is reported to be dear or scarce and water inadequate in parts of the northern and eastern districts. Agricultural stock is generally in good condition. There were no marked fluctuations in prices.

Feudatory States.—Embanking and ploughing of fields continued. Prices remained fairly steady.

The weekly report on the famine and scarcity is as follows :—Distress is not acute. The relief area is extending gradually in Damoh, Jubbulpore and Mandla. Adequate employment is provided by the expansion of ordinary works. There are no movements of people in numbers but a few immigrants from the Nagode State are reported in Jubbulpore. The condition of people is good and no emaciation is observed. The public health is good. Prices have fallen slightly again. The staple grain sells from nine to twelve seers. The numbers on relief were :—Works nil, gratuitious 7,298.

Bombay.—Rain fell during the week in Kanara, Nasik, Sholapur, Satara, the Karnatak and Kolhapur. Standing spring crops are good. Cotton picking is nearing completion. Preparations for autumn crops generally continue. The fodder supply is inadequate in Sholapur and in one-third of Poona and Satara. Grass and kadbi are being imported. Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 9th May 1914.

Burma.—Rain fell during the week in thirty-two districts. Eight districts registered a fall of 1 inch or more. Ploughing for cotton, groundnut and early sesamum has commenced and that for autumn rice continues. Harvesting of spring rice is proceeding. Standing crops are reported to be satisfactory. Pasturage is ample and the health of stock is good. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon is easier and the market steadier.

Assam.—Moderate to heavy rain has fallen in all districts. The heavy rain has retarded agricultural operations to a small extent in Goalpara, Darrang and Nowgong. Some damage has been caused to spring rice in Sylhet, and to the young autumn rice and jute plants in Goalpara. Hoeing and plucking of tea and ploughing for and sowing of early and winter rice continue. Harvesting of spring rice is nearly finished. Prospects of tea are good and those of other crops fair. The average price of common rice has fallen slightly. Cattle disease is reported from eight districts.

Bengal.—During the week rain fell throughout the Province. The fall was heavy in parts of North Bengal but was moderate elsewhere. Autumn paddy and jute have suffered to some extent owing to the heavy showers. Harvesting of summer rice and sowing of paddy and jute are going on. The state and prospects of standing crops are fair. Fodder is found to be sufficient in parts of Bankura, Midnapore and Tippera. Cattle disease is reported from ten districts. The price of common rice has risen very slightly as compared with that of the previous week.

Bihar and Orissa.—The rainfall during the week was general over the Province, the fall being moderate in Bihar and light in Orissa and Chota Nagpur. Threshing of spring crops and planting of sugarcane are nearly finished. Sowing of jute is in progress. Preparation of lands for autumn crops is going on and has been facilitated by the rainfall of the week. The newly planted sugarcane crop and other standing crops are doing well. The average price of common rice has risen slightly as compared with that of the preceding week. The supply of fodder and water is generally sufficient. Cattle disease is reported from twelve districts. Agricultural prospects in the Feudatory States of Orissa are on the whole good.

United Provinces.—General rain has fallen causing damage to crops in some districts. Threshing and winnowing of spring crops and opium weighments are almost complete. Irrigation and weeding of extra crops and hoeing of sugarcane are in progress. Preparation of land for autumn crops continues. Cattle disease continues to spread throughout the Provinces. Scarcity of fodder is still acute though the situation has been improved to some extent by the recent rain. Government hay is being freely taken for agricultural stock which is in fairly good condition. Prices are generally stationary with a slight downward tendency.

Simla, the 22nd May 1914.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, Department of Commerce and Industry.

In the Resolution of the Government of India in this Department No. 4519-4554-47, dated the 29th May 1907, it was decided that in view of the satisfactory financial position of the Post Office Insurance Fund the sums eventually payable in respect of existing policies in the Life Branch of the fund should be increased by 10 per cent and that the premia payable in respect of sums assured under policies issued on and after the 1st April 1907 should be correspondingly reduced. A recent investigation made into the past experience and present position of the Fund has shown that there is still a substantial surplus on the total operations connected with it and that it is possible to make a distribution of a considerable portion of the surplus without affecting the financial stability of the Fund. His Majesty's Secretary of State has accordingly sanctioned the grant to holders of policies on the valuation date, 31st March 1912, of a bonus at the rate of 2 per cent in the case of Whole Life Assurances, and 1 per cent in the case of Endowment Assurances, in respect of each year's premium paid since 31st March 1907 up to that date.

Revised tables have been drawn up showing the new premia rates applicable to future entrants and are annexed hereto.

Rainfall Summary for the seven days ending at 8 hrs. on Thursday, the 21st May 1914, based on the Indian Daily Weather Reports of the period.

1. The storm, which formed off the Andamans on the 12th, advanced to the north Madras coast and crossed inland to the south of Gopalpur. It then changed its direction of movement to northeast and finally to east, disappearing over Upper Burma on the 18th. It gave heavy rain in Orissa, Chota Nagpur, south Bihar, Bengal and Assam. A disturbance of the winter type also affected the weather during the week, and caused light rain in the extreme north, and along the hills of the Punjab and of the United Provinces.

Rainfall occurred in Burma, and thunderstorms were reported from the Madras presidency and Mysore.

2. Burma.—Some falls of rain were reported daily, but the 14th was the only day on which rainfall was nearly general.

Northeast India, including Orissa.—Nearly general rain fell in Orissa on the 14th, 15th and 16th, in Chota Nagpur on the 15th and 16th, in Bengal on the 16th and also on the 17th, except in the southwestern districts, and in Assam on the 17th, 18th and 19th. The storm from the Bay was the cause of heavy rain, chiefly in the southern half of the division.

The United Provinces, Central India and the Central Provinces.—Light showers were reported from Roorkee, Bareilly, Bahraich and Jagdalpur.

Northwest India.—The disturbance from the west gave rain at Quetta, and in the North-West Frontier Province, Kashmir, and the Punjab hills and submontane districts. Snow fell on the higher ranges of the Himalayas.

The Peninsula.—Rainfall occurred in the north of the Madras coast on the 14th and 15th, in connection with the storm from the Bay, and thunderstorms were reported during the week from the rest of Madras and from Mysore. Rainfall was nearly general in Malabar on the 15th and 16th.

Harvesting of spring rice has finished in parts of the Sylhet district. Prospects of tea and rice are fair to good. The average price of common rice has risen slightly. Cattle disease is reported from eight districts.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

SANITARY.

Simla, the 23rd May 1914.

RESOLUTION.

INDIAN SANITARY POLICY.

Historical summary.

The modern history of scientific sanitation in India may be said to date from the end of the last century. Previously there had indeed been periods of useful spade work and spasms of general sanitary activity. A Royal Commission, appointed in 1859 and reporting in 1863, recommended the formation of commissions of public health in the presidencies of Madras, Bombay and Bengal, with a view to the diminution of sickness in the army, and the improvement of the health of the general population. These commissions were appointed but were soon replaced in each presidency by a sanitary commissioner with an assistant. Sanitary inspectors general, afterwards called sanitary commissioners, were appointed in other provinces; and the sanitary and vaccination staffs were gradually amalgamated. In 1888, Lord Dufferin's Government issued a resolution drawing the attention of local bodies and village unions to their duties in the matter of sanitation; and sanitary boards were formed in every province. But comparatively little success attended these efforts except in the larger towns. On the one side, sanitary measures and systems of western countries were applied to India without due regard to the fundamental differences of western and eastern civilisations and of the conditions of life in tropical and temperate climates: on the other side, the people were unprepared for reform or any kind of change.

2. The ravages and horrors of plague and the discoveries resulting from medical research made some real impression on the educated community in India; and a demand gradually arose for sanitary surroundings and preventive measures, such as had not been known before. Individuals left their insanitary quarters for cleaner and healthier localities and in increasing numbers men began to realise the dangers to which they were exposed from existing conditions, and to appreciate the economic value of health and the wastefulness of sickness and premature death. Dislike of action was, however, for long persistent even among the educated. So far as the uneducated masses were concerned their apathy, fatalism and resentment of interference constituted a formidable obstacle to all sanitary progress.

Recent activity.

3. The governments in India have moved more rapidly of late. In 1898, the Government of India issued an important statement of policy. In 1908, imperial grants amounting to Rs. 30,00,000 (£200,000) a year were made to local Governments. A new department of the Government of India was created in 1910 in order to relieve the Home Department of education, sanitation and some other branches of the administration. In addition to sanitary conferences held by local Governments, three all-India sanitary conferences have been convened at Bombay, Madras and Lucknow, respectively, over which the Hon'ble Sir Harcourt Butler presided as Member of the Governor-General's Council in charge of the department concerned. These conferences were attended by non-officials as well as officials, by laymen as well as professional sanitarians. Again, the Indian Research Fund Association has been founded to further the prosecution of research, and the propagation of knowledge and experimental measures generally in connection with the causation, mode of spread and prevention of communicable diseases. To this fund the Government of India make an annually recurring grant of 5 lakhs of rupees (£33,333). Moreover, since the constitution of the new department of the Government of India, imperial grants have been made to local Governments and Administrations to the amount of Rs. 4,61,47,000 (£3,076,466), of which Rs. 55,23,000 (£368,200) are recurring, and Rs. 4,06,24,000 (£2,708,266) non-recurring. In addition, grants amounting to Rs. 82·33 lakhs (£548,866) a year have been made to district boards in certain provinces, a substantial portion of which will, it is hoped, be expended on rural sanitation. These grants have rendered practicable the execution of schemes which a few years ago seemed beyond the limits of financial possibility; and there can be little doubt that the movement for sanitary reform is now well established and progressive throughout the country.

4. There has thus been progress although the rate has hitherto been slow. In the land of the ox-cart one must not expect the pace of the motor car. The truly remarkable improvements effected of late years in the health of the army in India, in the case of Indian no less than British troops,* cannot be expected in connection with the civil population. In the case of the army, the problem is concerned mainly with well nourished adults, all of whom are selected lives, living in sanitary surroundings, under military discipline. Moreover, so soon as a soldier becomes unfit for active service, he leaves the army and forms part of the civil population. In the case of the civil population, the conditions of the problem are very different, and sanitary reform has still to grope its way through a labyrinth of difficulties. In order to be successful it must conform to three cardinal principles:—

Cardinal principles.

(1) it must rest on a knowledge of the people, their conditions of life, their prejudices, social customs and habits, their surroundings and financial means; and it must secure their co-operation;

(2) it must recognise the diversity of local conditions in a country which includes numerous communities, castes and creeds and which exhibits almost every variety of climate, temperature, humidity and level of sub-soil water, from the deltas of Bengal with their steamy atmosphere and dense lush vegetation to the burnt brown hills of the north-west frontier;

(3) its introduction must be preceded by preliminary local surveys, inquiry, or experiment.

5. As a result of the Plague Commission's Report Lord Curzon's Government took up with vigour the reorganisation of the sanitary department. Research institutes were started and an appointment of Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India was created. The functions of this officer were to advise the Government of India upon sanitary and bacteriological questions, to settle with local Governments the principles on which an advance should be made and to organise and direct research throughout India. The arrangement was not completely successful. Among the disadvantages, the separation of research from clinical work deterred men from entering the department, and the office work in connection with research prevented the Sanitary Commissioner from undertaking wide and constant touring. The organisation was accordingly modified in 1912. The Sanitary Commissioner and for the appointment of health officers (of the first-class for larger municipalities and of the second-class for the smaller towns) on the lines of detailed proposals received from local Governments. Twelve additional appointments of deputy sanitary commissioner, thirty-five appointments of health officer of the first-class and a large addition to the number of second-class health officers were sanctioned in 1912 and 1913, the entire cost of the additional deputy sanitary commissioners on the basis of the scale of pay fixed for Indians and half the cost of the health officers being met by imperial grants. The Government of India also advised local Governments to take powers, where these did not exist, to require a municipality to appoint a health officer and to veto the appointment of an unfit person. Such powers already exist in the Bombay presidency, and have recently been taken by legislation in Bengal. Simultaneously, the Government of India recommended the system in force in Madras whereby every municipality is required to employ one or more trained sanitary inspectors in proportion to population. Sanitary inspectors are now being employed in large numbers in towns. In addition, the civil surgeon in every district is the sanitary adviser of the local authorities and in most provinces controls the vaccination staff. The provision of an increased staff of sanitary engineers is engaging urgent attention.

The Government of India attach great importance to the organisation of voluntary agencies and have recently made a grant of Rs. 20,000 (£1,333)—a sum equivalent to that given by the Bombay Government—to the Bombay sanitary association, which was founded in 1903, and now has corresponding branches in several districts and native states.

7. The policy of the Government of India is to keep the control of research under itself, but to decentralise other branches of sanitation. The creation of an imperial department is no departure from that policy, and the large imperial grants already mentioned have been made without any interference with provincial Governments. While the general direction of a policy of public health must remain with the central Government, all detailed control and executive action are, and will be, left to local Governments. The Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India is a touring officer empowered to consult and confer informally with local Governments and their officers upon matters connected with sanitation. He is not permitted to encroach upon the authority of local Governments over the officers under their control.

8. The position of provincial sanitary commissioners towards the administrative heads of the medical department varies somewhat in different provinces. The Government of India do not wish to interfere with the arrangements which local Governments may consider best suited to local conditions, but they desire to insist on the importance of defining the functions of the two officers and securing to the sanitary commissioner the position of responsible technical adviser to the local Government in all matters affecting public health.

9. In every province, sanitary boards have been composed with varying powers, some being merely advisory, others having authority to sanction schemes and allot funds. These boards are composed of officers belonging to the medical, sanitary, engineering and other branches of the civil services with the addition of non-officials. The Government of India view with favour and confidence the devolution of financial authority and responsibility to these boards, and they commend to local Governments the appointment of a permanent salaried secretary to the board where this has not been done. They believe that such an appointment, wherever made, has resulted in an increase of efficiency.

10. Arrangements for training the superior sanitary staff are now engaging the attention of the Government of India. The chief difficulty at present is to provide courses in practical hygiene and in the study of the bacteriology and etiology of tropical diseases. It is hoped in the near future to make arrangements in India for the former and to utilise the schools of tropical medicine at Calcutta and elsewhere for the latter. Meanwhile, a British diploma in public health is required from candidates for the post of deputy sanitary commissioners and health officers of the first-class. The problems of public health in India are vitally complicated by the fact that biting insects are a prominent factor in the dissemination of disease, and it is obviously desirable to provide in India, as soon as possible, a complete course of training for sanitary officers.

Training classes for sanitary inspectors are now held in all the more important provinces.

11. A substantial beginning has thus been made for the development of a department of public health and Indians have been freely enlisted for it. The posts of deputy sanitary commissioner and health officer are now open to Indians. Nine deputy sanitary commissioners out of 26 and the majority of health officers are Indians. The new bacteriological department consisting of 28 officers is also open to duly qualified Indians.

As health officers and sanitary engineers gradually relieve deputy sanitary commissioners of much of the drudgery of inspection and routine work, it is hoped that the latter will be set free to deal with epidemics and communicable diseases from a higher plane, and to consider issues of public health wider than those which they are able to review to-day. It is, therefore, important to provide in advance free interchange between them, the laboratory workers and those carrying out practical research in the field.

Research.

12. Research is slowly lifting the veil which hides the secrets of disease and mortality and opening up fields of inquiry scarcely thought of a generation ago. The discovery by Sir Ronald Ross of the part played by the mosquito in the communication of malaria and the appointment of the Plague Commission in 1898 are landmarks in the history of Indian Sanitation. In 1902, a research institute was founded at Guindy in Madras, named the King Institute after Lieutenant-Colonel King, C.I.E., I.M.S., in view of his devoted efforts in the cause of sanitation in that presidency. In 1905, Lord Curzon's Government summed up the position and the policy of the Government of India in regard to the establishment of laboratories for the study of problems of public health in India. The functions of the central laboratory were original research, the preparation of curative sera and the training of scientific workers. The functions of the provincial laboratories were diagnosis and special research connected with local conditions. This policy has been steadily developed. The Central Research Institute has been established at Kasauli. The Plague Research Laboratory at Parel has been extended and re-equipped and is now the bacteriological laboratory for the Bombay presidency; and a proposal is under consideration to attach to it a school of tropical medicine. A research laboratory and school of tropical medicine are under construction at Calcutta. Pasteur institutes exist at Kasauli and Coonoor. A third is about to be established in Burma, and it is under discussion to establish others in Assam (where it will be combined with a research laboratory) and Bombay.

Besides the routine work connected with the bacteriological diagnosis of disease, anti-rabic treatment, the manufacture of various vaccines and sera and general research, these laboratories at different times have been the centres of many special investigations, notable amongst which are those on plague and enteric fever. It is hoped that before long each province in India will have a laboratory fully equipped for research.

Indian Research Fund Association.

13. The foundation of the Indian Research Fund Association in 1911 has marked an important era in sanitary progress. The control and management of the association are vested in a governing body, the president of which is the Member in charge of the Education Department of the Government of India. The governing body is assisted by a "scientific advisory board" of which not less than three members have seats on the governing body. They examine all proposals for work in connection with the scientific objects of the association and report as to their importance and feasibility. The members of this board are appointed for one year, but are eligible for re-election, and they have power to add to their number. The present members are the Director-General, Indian Medical Service, the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India, the Director of the Central Research Institute at Kasauli, the Officer in charge of the Central Malarial Bureau and the Assistant Director-General, Indian Medical Service (Sanitary): Sir Ronald Ross has been elected an honorary consulting member. The membership of the Indian Research Fund Association is open to non-officials. Every donor of Rs. 5,000 is entitled to become a permanent member, while every subscriber of Rs. 100 per annum can be a temporary member. Members of the association are entitled to attend and take part in the annual general meeting of the association and to receive copies of the reports and other publications issued from time to time by the association. Although, so far, the fund has been financed solely by the Government of India, it is hoped that in time Indian philanthropists will contribute towards the expansion of the association by founding chairs of research, by financing experimental research measures and otherwise.

14. The association has been active and can already point to some achievement. Out of an income of Rs. 15 lakhs (£100,000) received since its incorporation and up to the end of 1913-14, an expenditure of over Rs. 14 lakhs (£93,333) has been sanctioned. In 1911, Major S. P. James, I.M.S., was deputed to study yellow fever in its endemic area and to draw up proposals for protecting India against the introduction of the disease. Those proposals are still under consideration. In the meanwhile, stegomyia surveys have been carried out in Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Karachi and Rangoon and other seaports. Anti-malaria schemes based on preliminary surveys have been carried out at a cost of Rs. 6,02,000 (£40,133). Investigations are at present in progress into the problems connected with the prevalence of cholera, kala-azar, dysentery, leprosy and goitre, as well as inquiries into the pharmacology of cinchona derivatives, the use of hydrocyanic acid gas as a pulicide and the fixation of chemical standards of purity for milk and milk products. Other investigations are under consideration regarding bacteriological standards of purity for water-supplies, the different anti-cholera vaccines and sera, the methods of water filtration and silt removal best suited to Indian conditions, and the etiology of diabetes and the fevers of short duration. These will be started so soon as more trained research workers are available. It is hoped also to carry out, during the next non-epidemic season, an experiment in plague prevention on a large scale on the lines indicated in paragraph 22.

15. Besides financing the investigations conducted by its own staff, the association gives grants-in-aid to outside research on approved lines. The co-operation of other workers has been sought, and every encouragement has been given to them. Grants for research have been made, for instance, to Professor MacMahon, Dr. Hossack and Mr. Howlett. The services of Indians have also been enlisted. Dr. Korke is engaged in an important investigation into kala-azar, while Mr. Awati, a medical entomologist, is employed under the association. The Government of India cordially approve the policy of encouraging private enterprise in the cause of research.

16. The association has also started a journal for the publication of medical research work done in India—the "Indian Journal of Medical Research"—published quarterly. The favourable reception which has been accorded to the first three numbers is evidence of the increased interest that is being taken in sanitary science in India to-day.

17. The investigations enumerated above represent the work directly under the supervision of the Government of India. The local Governments also are fully alive to the importance of research, and in seven provinces nine special officers are at present engaged in investigating the causes underlying the local prevalence of malaria and devising suitable schemes for the mitigation of that disease.

Malaria.

18. It remains to consider the results of research as applied to the chief tropical diseases, always remembering that they are liable to revision or modification in the light of further investigation and discoveries. The most important tropical disease is malaria. After allowance has been made for the tendency to attribute to fever deaths from other causes, malaria stands out as universally prevalent in India and in many tracts is a scourge far greater than either plague or cholera. It maims as well as kills and causes more sickness, misery and death than any other single disease. Measures for the prevention of malaria aim at breaking the cycle of infection in two ways, (a) by attacks on the parasites in man, and (b) by the destruction of mosquitoes. To the former class belong the different systems of quinine prophylaxis and treatment; and to the latter, all those measures which aim at abolishing mosquito breeding grounds. Both methods have been successful in other countries and both have been tried extensively in India. The following propositions represent the experience gained up to date:—

(1) The conditions and causes underlying the prevalence of malaria vary greatly in different places, and no one anti-malarial measure is suitable for all.

(2) Quinine both as a prophylactic and curative agent is of great value to the individual. Its powers of saving life, alleviating sickness and destroying sources of infection cannot be over-estimated. There should be no relaxation in the efforts to educate the people in the use of the drug: and its sale by shop-keepers in rural areas might well be encouraged.

(3) The regular administration of quinine to children in schools during the malarial season is a practical measure of easy application and of proved utility: it is valuable alike for its immediate good effects on the health of the scholars and as a means of spreading knowledge of the use of quinine.

(4) In any community under control quinine prophylaxis properly carried out is a valuable weapon in the fight against malaria: in India with its free population, the ignorance and apathy of the masses, their prejudice against the drug, their objection to medicine when not actually suffering from illness, and the fact that it must be continued over an indefinite number of years, greatly limit the value of quinine prophylaxis.

(5) In anti-larval operations it is not necessary to abolish all breeding grounds of mosquitoes, even of known carriers of malarial infection: a marked amelioration in health conditions will ensue if the chief breeding grounds of the malaria-carrying mosquitoes are cleared.

(6) Malaria surveys have brought to light important and unexpected facts regarding the causation of malaria in particular localities. For instance, the enquiries of Major Liston and Dr. Bentley in Bombay disclosed the fact that malaria did not arise from the swampy surroundings of the city and that the malaria-carrying mosquito was N. stephensi which bred in the numerous wells attached to private houses. Again, Major Christophers has demonstrated that malaria in the Andamans is due to a species of mosquito M. ludlowi which breeds in the brackish water of the creeks and that the mosquitoes infesting the rice-fields in the neighbourhood are innocuous.

(7) Notwithstanding the initial expense, those anti-malarial measures should be chosen which will act automatically, be independent of outside help and permanent in their effects: those which require regular repetition, constant attention or active co-operation on the part of the people, are, under present conditions, seldom durably effective.

(8) The treatment of permanent collections of water is important whether it be effected by (a) water tidiness, through sloping of banks and clearing of weeds, or (b) stocking with fish of proved utility as mosquito destroyers, or by both methods.

19. The Government of India have arranged classes for instruction in practical malaria work twice a year. The course is so planned that each member of the class takes an actual part in the preparation of a malaria survey which will eventually be the basis of a practical scheme of malaria prevention. Already 155 medical officers in civil and military employ have passed through the classes. It is hoped before long to spread a large number of trained and active workers over the whole of India.

The Lucknow Sanitary Conference recommended that a malariologist and engineer should be deputed to Italy to study the methods of "colmate" and "bonificazione" under the auspices of the Indian Research Fund Association, and it is hoped to arrange for their deputation. The effect of silt deposit on the malarial conditions of deltaic areas in India is also receiving attention; and interesting experiments are being conducted by the Government of Bengal at Berhampur. Experiments in clearing jungle and undergrowth will shortly be undertaken.

Plague.

20. The Plague Research Commission, which was constituted in 1905 and is still continuing its investigations, has thrown much light on the etiology and epidemiology of the disease. The chief conclusions that have been reached so far may be summarised as follows :—

(1) In India, where the pneumonic form of the disease is relatively rare, plague is essentially a disease of rats communicable to man and a few of the lower animals; an epidemic amongst men is directly dependent upon an epizootic amongst rats.

(2) Plague spreads from rat to rat and from rat to man through the agency of the rat flea.

(3) The plague bacillus under natural conditions does not long retain its vitality outside the body of the rat, the rat flea, or man.

(4) Plague has a definite seasonal prevalence, generally constant for any given place, but varying in different parts of India; investigation shows that the plague season coincides with the season of maximum prevalence of rat fleas.

(5) Infection is carried from place to place only over very short distances by the spontaneous movements of rats: in other cases, infection is carried either (a) by the agency of man or personal effects acting as a means of transport for infected fleas, or (b) by means of merchandise, chiefly grain, which may contain rats as well as fleas. It is not yet established which of these two agencies is the more important, but recent work, both in India and the Far East, has emphasised the importance of grain as a vehicle for the transmission of infection.

(6) In comparatively few places in India does plague infection survive the adverse conditions of the non-epidemic season: such places are usually either (a) large towns, or (b) places which have been infected late in the epidemic season.

(7) In places which have suffered from repeated and severe epidemics of plague, the rats have become less susceptible to plague than are the rats in places which have remained plague-free or have suffered but slightly.

21. These conclusions have been arrived at after much careful and painstaking research and constitute a great advance on the knowledge of plague, which was available when, in 1896, it first appeared in Bombay. They point, apparently, to a simple solution of the plague problem—no rats no plague. But this solution is not attainable unless the population concerned is convinced of the danger of living in close association with the rat and is ready to co-operate in its extermination. Unfortunately, attempts at rat destruction by trapping or poison frequently meet with active opposition. Experience in India suggests that owing to the excessive fecundity of the animals, general rat destruction, even when applied to extensive areas, gives only a temporary reduction of rat infestation and has a limited sphere of usefulness as an anti-plague measure.

22. In one direction, however, well directed efforts at rat destruction may prove useful. In each epidemic a number of places are infected late in the season and in certain of these plague survives the non-epidemic period only to break out in a virulent form when the conditions of spread again become more favourable. These localities are potential foci of extensive infection. It would seem important to concentrate the energies of the plague preventive staff on them in well organised schemes of rat destruction carried out during the quiescent period before the commencement of the next epidemic season.

23. Much can be done, indirectly, to reduce the number of rats in towns and villages, by diminishing their food supply. In any place the number of rats is in proportion to the quantity of food which they can obtain. Efficient scavenging and the protection of food-stuffs from the depredations of rats are important from this point of view. The markets, grain stores, and shops, in most parts of India, are so placed and constructed as to give food and shelter to large numbers of rats. Experiments are being carried out with a view to discovering the best practical means of disinfecting grain stores and godowns. It is not practicable at present to remove grain markets and godowns outside towns, to prevent them from being used as dwellings for men, to insist on solid masonry buildings, or to prohibit the stabling of horses and cattle in the precincts of dwelling houses. But these measures and the storage of grain in bulk instead of in bags may, with the progress of education, hereafter enter the zone of practicability. The exclusion of rats from houses is important. In several provinces experiments with different types of so-called rat-proof houses have been made with varying degrees of success. The results suggest that no form of house could remain rat-free for long in India owing to the habits of the people. Even were this not the case it would obviously be impracticable, for financial reasons, to render dwelling houses in the towns and villages of India rat-proof on anything like a large scale. On the other hand, the individual can protect himself by providing his house with masonry floors and walls and windows enough to give ample light and air to every room and by preventing accumulations of rubbish amongst which rats can build their nests. The rat requires shelter for breeding, is mainly nocturnal in its habits and prefers darkness to light.

24. Three other measures remain to be considered—evacuation, disinfection and inoculation. The evacuation of all houses in large towns, on the occurrence of rat mortality therein or human plague cases in adjacent dwellings, is rarely possible, but in villages and parts of smaller towns it is a valuable means of checking an epidemic of plague. Disinfection to be efficacious should be directed against the rat and the rat-flea. It is of little value when it leaves both untouched. The practical objections to compulsory inoculations with anti-plague vaccine on a large scale continue; but the safety and efficiency of inoculation as a personal preventive measure against infection has been abundantly proved, and in certain areas the prejudice against it appears to be diminishing. The Government of India desire that every facility should be afforded to any one wishing to obtain this protection for himself or his family and they commend to local Governments the employment of carefully selected private practitioners to this end.

Cholera.

25. Cholera is now much less prevalent than formerly, but frequently occasions severe epidemics and still remains a constant cause of mortality. Epidemics have in several recent cases been traced to pilgrims returning from places of religious pilgrimage, at which there had been no recognised outbreak of the disease. In 1912, Major Greig was deputed to make a special investigation of the whole subject. That investigation, which still continues, has added to knowledge regarding the propagation of cholera and has established the fact that not only cholera convalescents, but also healthy persons who have been in contact with cholera cases, can act as "carriers" of the disease. It has also been shown that the germs of the disease can be recovered from a patient's dejecta kept under natural conditions for a variable but frequently considerable period, and that flies may play an important part in the dissemination of infection. These observations, while in no way opposed to previous knowledge that cholera is a water-borne disease, accentuate the importance of careful and thorough conservancy.

Small-pox.

26. Small-pox is not a tropical disease, but it used to be so rife in India as to be associated among Hindus with its own special goddess. It now occupies a small place in the mortality returns. This result is due to the spread of vaccination during the latter half of the last century.

Vaccination.

Formerly, nearly all vaccination was effected by human lymph, but within recent years arm-to-arm vaccination has been steadily replaced by the use of pure glycerinated or lanolinated calf lymph. The change has been doubly beneficial; it does away with the necessity of breaking the vesicle in the child's arm, a simple operation but one which exposes the wound to contamination by extraneous germs; and it ensures that the vaccination is effected with a pure and fully potent lymph with consequent increase of protection. The change has been especially welcomed by educated Indians. Madras, Bombay, Bengal, Burma, the United Provinces, the Punjab, the Central Provinces and Assam have each now their own calf lymph depôts, and the opening of another for the province of Bihar and Orissa is under consideration. Grants of Rs. 2,00,000 (£13,333), were given from imperial revenues last year to improve the depôts in the United Provinces, the Punjab and Burma, and to establish the new depôt in the Central Provinces.

Tuberculosis.

27. The prevalence of tuberculosis throughout India especially in the large cities is undoubted. In some of the latter, the mortality exceeds that of certain crowded European cities. The difficulties of coping with the disease in India are immense and demand the fullest co-operation between Government and private agency. One or more officers will be detailed to investigate the causes underlying the disease, to organise the diffusion of information, and to advise regarding measures for the prevention of infection: the services of Dr. Lankester have already been secured by the Indian Research Fund Association for this purpose. Recent research appears to show that tuberculosis in India is chiefly human and not bovine in origin. Indian cattle so far as is known are practically free from the disease, and Indians do not as a rule drink unboiled milk. The source of the disease is in the homes of the people, and the relief of congested areas and the provision of sufficient light and air in human tenements are preventive measures of great value. The Government of India invite attention to the recommendation of the Lucknow sanitary conference that circumspection should be exercised before instituting at considerable cost further large sanatoria. They consider that inexpensive buildings suitable as model dwellings for the people may prove of great educative value and they desire to encourage tuberculosis hospitals and dispensaries. They also take this opportunity of communicating the warning of the Lucknow conference against the indiscriminate use of tuberculin by unqualified medical practitioners.

Infant mortality.

28. No summary of public health is complete without a reference to infant mortality. In 1911, of 4,752,152 male children and 4,457,551 females born in India, 1,016,8:3 males and 873,677 females died. In other words, about one-fifth of the children born died within the first year of their life. It is difficult to arrive at the actual causes of this high rate of mortality. The figures at the disposal of Government are often of doubtful accuracy, and the comparison of figures from different localities is frequently fallacious. On a broad view of the subject the causes of infant mortality may thus be summarised: (1) malaria operating both directly on the infant and indirectly through the mother; (2) diseases due to insanitary surroundings and exposure to infection especially through the medium of flies; (3) diseases due to ignorance on the part of the mother with regard to the feeding and care of the infant; (4) accidents of child birth and diseases attendant thereon. For (3) and (4) the custom of early marriage and the primitive and insanitary methods of midwifery are largely responsible. The latter lead directly to the death of the infant from tetanus and other diseases, and indirectly increase the infant mortality by depriving children of their natural nourishment either through the death of the mother or the failure of her milk as the result of sepsis. Deficiency in the supply of cow's milk has not been proved to be a predominant cause of infant mortality in India; but the question of improving both the quality and the quantity of the milk-supply without increasing its cost is engaging earnest attention (vide paragraph 42).

It is hoped that the instruction of mothers and midwives will engage the attention of all medical women practising in India and especially interest the women's medical service which has recently been established. In some of the large cities in India, notably Calcutta, Bombay and Madras, nurse health visitors have been appointed by municipalities to visit the people in their homes and assist and instruct mothers in the elementary principles of hygiene. In Bombay, an interesting experiment has been started by Dr. Turner in the form of lectures to the midwives. Another is likely to be made under the auspices of the Indian Research Fund Association in Delhi, where it is proposed to detail two trained nurses for work as health visitors.

Vital statistics.

29. The course of sanitary reform is much impeded by the want of complete and accurate vital statistics. Without them it is difficult to gauge the effects of sanitary measures or to convince people of their efficacy. The difficulties in the way of improving the reporting and recording agency especially in rural areas are great; but systematic checking and supervision of returns should yield good results. Dispensary returns and voluntary notification by private medical practitioners are useful as checks but are only partial in their scope. A comprehensive scheme for the improvement of general reporting is required. The Government of India invite the attention of local Governments to the importance of the subject.

30 The Government of India recognise that differences in local conditions preclude the issue of any general instructions but they commend the following propositions for consideration:—

(a) The reporting of vital occurrences should not be left exclusively to the municipal staff; reporting by the head of the household also should be insisted on. The two reports would then be available to check one another.

(b) The actual registration should be done not as an extra duty but by special registrars who should, if possible, possess a medical qualification. In the case of deaths, inquiries regarding the symptoms of the deceased could then be made from the person reporting and some check on the diagnosis of the cause of death could be obtained. Many people are attended during their last illness by unqualified persons or die without medical attendance.

(c) The registrar should be required to verify at least 10 per cent of the reported births and deaths and this verification should, as far as possible, include all particulars such as cause, date, age, sex, place, etc.

(d) The health officer should be in charge of the vital statistics in the town and should be responsible for supervising and checking the work.

(e) Experiments might be made in obtaining accurate registration in typical areas by means of a special staff which would also be employed in healing the sick.

Sanitary surveys.

31. Concurrently with attention to the registration of vital statistics the Government of India commend to local Governments the importance of sanitary surveys on broad lines. Something has been done in this direction and valuable reports have been drawn up, giving the real health conditions of towns and particular localities and indicating the existence of any special sickness or mortality and the definite causes underlying them. The Government of India desire that systematic working plans should be drawn up where this has not already been done with a view to mapping out the sanitary conditions of all the more important towns and localities in which sickness or mortality is above normal. This will occupy years of steady preparation; but as deputy sanitary commissioners are relieved of much of the routine work which at present they have to perform they should be able to carry this undertaking to a successful issue. The preparation of drainage surveys in towns in advance of needs obviates waste in the long run. In the absence of such surveys, work is often commenced in a haphazard way without due consideration of a scheme as a whole.

Urban sanitation.

32. Urban sanitation has, as already observed, received much attention of late years. It falls generally under four heads, viz., conservancy, water-supply, drainage and town-planning with improvement of housing and the relief of congested areas. In the forefront of these stands conservancy.

Conservancy.

33. The importance of efficient scavenging with speedy and complete removal of all night-soil and rubbish from the vicinity of habitations and its satisfactory disposal can scarcely be exaggerated. Yet probably no department of public health work is more neglected in many Indian towns. The strict rules of the caste system have for centuries relegated everything connected with this work to the outcast, and the people, as a rule, evince little if any interest in the conservancy even of their own houses. To this neglect must be attributed the plague of flies which at certain seasons is experienced in every Indian town. Apart from the discomfort which they cause, flies are known to be the disseminators of many diseases, including cholera, enteric fever, tuberculosis, dysentery and diarrhœa and are largely responsible for the heavy mortality amongst infants. The all-India sanitary conferences at Madras and Lucknow drew prominent attention to the danger to health caused by the presence of these noxious insects, and the results of the recent "anti-fly" campaign at Delhi suggest that a large reduction in the number of flies is by no means an impossible task.

34. Whether incineration or shallow trenching or either of these methods of conservancy combined with water carriage is the best in any particular case will depend very largely on local conditions and customs. With the extension of drainage and sewerage systems, water carriage of all night-soil, with ultimate disposal on sewage farms, should give the best result. In the majority of towns, however, it will be long before this is generally practicable and the choice rests between incineration and trenching. Of the two methods, incineration is safer and on this account, if conditions permit, is preferable. Trenching is often thought to be more economical; but the profits obtainable from the trenching or pitting of night-soil and sale of the poudrette disappear, or are largely reduced, when the expense of carriage and supervision is taken into account. The material consideration in all cases is that the removal and disposal should be prompt. As education spreads and the number of health officers and sanitary inspectors increases, improved results may be anticipated.

Water-supply.

35. Few subjects have received more attention of late than the provision of a piped supply of filtered water in towns. Complete figures are not available but sums amounting to at least Rs. 3,51,58,297 (£2,343,886) have been spent during the last 20 years on completed schemes. Projects costing Rs. 1,40,03,433 (£933,562) are under construction and projects costing Rs. 1,14,44,750 (£762,983) have been prepared and sanctioned. These figures are exclusive of the expenditure in the presidency towns and Rangoon.

36. The demand for piped and filtered water-supply grows, and is likely to grow more rapidly in future. While recognising the need for treating the question with due regard to local conditions, the Government of India offer the following general observations:—

(a) When piped water-supplies were first introduced, in the face of opposition, it was necessary that the charges should be made as low as possible. That stage has now been passed, and there appears no good reason why water-supplies should not be conducted on a business footing and the water charged for like any other commodity. An interesting discussion on the financing of water supplies was introduced by the Hon'ble Mr. Curtis at the Madras sanitary conference.

(b) On the whole, the provision of piped filtered water in towns has not been followed by that reduction in water-borne disease which might have been expected. This is probably due in most cases to the large number of wells, both public and private, which still remain in use. The closure of many of these wells is much to be desired, but the owners are unlikely to consent to this so long as the piped supply is intermittent and is drawn off hot or unpleasantly warm during the summer. In any case the substitution of a constant for an intermittent supply will shortly have to be considered as pipes get older and in-suction declares itself. The warmth of the water is more difficult to deal with, but much might be done by burying pipes deeper in the ground and carrying house pipes inside instead of outside houses.

(c) Excessive wastage is common and causes not only an unnecessary burden on the municipality but frequently also a defective supply in the higher portions of the distribution. The employment of a regular waste-detection staff has in most cases been found to make for economy and efficiency.

Drainage.

37. Drainage schemes, on modern lines, are the basis of all sanitary improvement in urban areas. The demand for them is scarcely less than that for piped water and is steadily on the increase As in the case of water-supply complete figures are not available but the known expenditure during the last twenty years has been considerable and is now rapidly increasing. The expenditure on completed works outside the presidency towns and Rangoon during that period amounted to Rs. 97,65,019 (£651,001) whereas the cost of the works under construction is estimated at Rs. 1,54,20,502 (£1,028,033). In the beginning precedence over drainage was given to piped water-supply but experience has demonstrated the advantage of introducing both concurrently. Without drainage there is no means of carrying off the surplus water and without piped water-supply it is difficult to flush the drains properly.

38. When drainage schemes on modern lines were first started in this country there seems to have been a bias against the use of sewers and, wherever possible, open drains were adopted. Experience has shown that the preference for the open drain, and the fear that sewers would give excessive trouble, were not well founded. On the contrary, much of the advantage of a drainage system is lost if only open drains are used, as the old system of hand-carriage latrines has to be continued. Moreover, economy in establishment is possible only in the case of a sewerage system.

Epidemic diseases.

39. The Government of India desire to invite the attention of local Governments to the importance of providing adequate facilities for the isolation of cases of epidemic diseases. The isolation of individuals suffering from infectious diseases is often desirable and sometimes necessary, and it would seem desirable to have in every important municipality a small well-built segregation hospital in charge of a qualified medical practitioner, who might be one of the medical registrars for vital statistics.

A revised set of regulations under the Indian Ports Act for the prevention of the spread of infectious and contagious diseases is under consideration.

Pilgrim centres and pilgrimages.

40. Pilgrimages necessitating as they do the collection of large numbers of persons, often more than a million, at one place at one time have an important sanitary aspect mainly in connection with cholera (vide, paragraph 25) and other communicable diseases. The Government of India recently decided to examine the sanitary arrangements at the chief places of pilgrimage throughout India and local Governments were asked to appoint provincial committees for this purpose under the presidency of the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India with a view to formulate practical schemes of improvement. The inquiry is still in progress but the Government of India have already made a grant of Rs 2 lakhs (£13,333) and promised an additional grant of 4 lakhs of rupees (£26,666) spread over four years towards the improvement of the pilgrim route to Badrinath; and they have made a further recurring grant of Rs. 20,000 (£1,333) a year for the same object. The important question of improving the conditions of the pilgrimage to the Hedjaz by Indian Musulmans is undergoing close scrutiny. The Governor-General in Council anticipates that these inquiries will lead to signal sanitary improvements and promote the convenience and comfort of many millions of His Majesty's loyal Indian subjects.

Adulteration of food and drugs.

41. The adulteration of food and drugs is common and has an important bearing on public health. Provisions for dealing with adulteration of food-stuffs exist in most municipal enactments in India, but these are confined to municipal areas and are restricted in their operation. Bombay and the United Provinces have special laws dealing with the question The Government of India have recently enquired from local Governments as to the desirability of legislation, imperial or provincial, on the subject. The question is not free from difficulty, as, besides the necessity of fixing standards, a competent staff of analysts and inspectors is necessary, and for any real success the co-operation of the people is required.

Adulteration of milk.

42. The adulteration of milk is almost universal in Indian bazaars and a large proportion of the milk consumed is contaminated. In most cities, the milk-supply is in the hands of men ignorant of the elements of sanitation and addicted to uncleanly practices. Moreover, the milk when stored and in transit to market is liable to contamination in several ways. On the other hand, the price of milk is already very high and the problem of improving the purity of the supply without increasing the price to such an extent as to cause hardship to the poorer classes is a difficult one.

The Lucknow sanitary conference recommended that the development of the dairy industry and the organisation of the transport and sale of milk should ordinarily precede measures of sanitary restriction; and that there should be mutual help and co operation between sanitarians, milk dealers and the agricultural department. That department is already considering how to develop a profitable dairy animal, a measure largely dependent on suitable and regular feeding. While local authorities should clearly insist on cleanliness in the conditions under which cattle are milked and dairy produce is manufactured, stored, or transported in towns, the removal of cattle so far as possible to cheap, healthy and natural surroundings outside cities is a measure greatly to be commended. The establishment of co-operative dairy farms in the United Provinces, the Central Provinces and elsewhere has so far been attended with success and should be encouraged. Attempts might well be made to induce gwalas to organise milk production outside cities and its transport to market on co-operative principles Should these methods prove successful, it may be possible without raising the price to bring the milk-supply under necessary sanitary control. The Government of India commend the whole question to the early attention of local Governments. With regard to milk standards, conditions in India differ from those in Europe, and chemical standards should be fixed by persons possessing adequate local knowledge and experience, and with due regard to local conditions.

Town planning and relief of congested areas.

43. While much has been done to provide drainage and pure water in large cities, there can be little hope of improving their sanitary condition permanently until measures are taken to relieve congested areas and to provide broader streets and buildings more open to sun and air. The constitution in 1898 of the Improvement Trust in Bombay marked a notable step in advance. By the end of 1912-1913, the Bombay Trust had incurred an expenditure of Rs. 488 lakhs (£3,253,333) towards schemes aggregating Rs. 802 lakhs (£5,346,666). Broad roads have been driven through the heart of the city, slum areas have been abolished; and dwellings provided for the accommodation of the poorer classes. The Calcutta Improvement Trust constituted in 1911 is now developing similar schemes for the improvement and development of Calcutta. Funds for these great projects have been provided mainly from local taxation and municipal contributions, supplemented in the case of each city by an imperial grant of Rs. 50 lakhs (£333,333) and, in the case of Calcutta, by a recurring grant of Rs. 1½ lakhs (£10,000) for 60 years. In other provinces similar works have been carried out on a smaller scale in the larger towns, notably in the United Provinces and at Lucknow.

There has been, as already stated, an increasing desire on the part of the well-to-do in cities to escape from their present insanitary surroundings and to obtain houses in more open positions outside city limits. In India, as in England, municipalities are confronted by the difficulty of obtaining land for town extensions except at prohibitive cost. The multiplicity of small owners in this country, and the impossibility of persuading them to co-operate, render any considered and comprehensive plan of town extension impossible in the absence of some controlling and co-ordinating authority armed with powers of compulsion. In their letter of 26th July 1912, the Government of India indicated their opinion that where land on the outskirts of a town was mainly agricultural and could be acquired cheaply en bloc, the local body would probably be well advised to purchase it outright.

44. Such a policy, however, will, for financial reasons, often be impossible on a large scale. Where the cost of acquisition is prohibitive, control may be preferable to acquisition, and in their circular letter of the 26th July 1912 the Government of India drew attention to the features of a scheme under discussion in the Bombay Presidency which has now been incorporated in a Town Planning Bill The principal feature of this scheme is that the cost is apportioned and recovered from the various persons and interests concerned in the shape of a development contribution calculated in proportion to the increased value which is estimated to accrue to each plot on the completion of the scheme, the tax that can be levied from any one owner being limited, as in England, to one-half of the betterment estimated to accrue. The local body remains liable for any excess cost not covered by the tax. Such a scheme involves taking powers to pool and redistribute small holdings in a form suitable for building purposes. It has the advantage of reducing capital outlay while securing for public purposes a share in the profits of the transaction The Government of India have also invited an examination of the provisions of municipal acts for dealing with insanitary areas and have inquired whether the limitations contained in the English Housing Acts on excessive compensation in areas, which, after due inquiry, have been declared insanitary, might not be introduced in India. The first step towards improvement is to fix a standard of light and ventilation suitable to local conditions; the next is to ensure that adequate building regulations providing for this standard are introduced by all municipal bodies and that a competent executive staff is appointed with full powers to carry them out. The whole question will be reviewed when the replies of local Governments have been received.

Rural sanitation.

45. The difficulties which surround rural sanitation in India are well-known and persistent. Contaminated sites, polluted water-supply, badly constructed and insanitary dwellings, the habits and prejudices of the people raise obstacles to progress which in most provinces are still well-nigh insuperable. The Government of India have informed local Governments that they are at liberty to expend a portion of the imperial grants for urban sanitation on rural sanitation, provided practical schemes for this purpose are forthcoming; but they have postponed special imperial grants for this purpose until such schemes are more generally advanced. They fully appreciate the enormous importance of rural sanitation in a country which is mainly agricultural. Past experience and present conditions, however, indicate that the subject is still one for experiment on lines conceived to attract the co-operation of the people. Without their cordial help no sanitary staff could effectually deal with the village sanitation of the two hundred and twenty millions who inhabit rural areas in British India. The danger of employing low-paid and imperfectly trained subordinates in a matter so closely affecting village-life is now generally recognized and should never be out of mind.

46. The following observations are based on practical experience of rural sanitation :—

(a) Travelling dispensaries may be used to spread a knowledge of the simple facts regarding the more common diseases. For this purpose the sub-assistant surgeons in charge should be given a special training in hygiene Once they become known to the people as healers of the sick their advice as sanitarians may become more acceptable.

(b) The improvement of the village water-supply is as important as it is difficult. Apparently, excellent results have been obtained by disinfection of wells with permanganate of potash. Experiments are being made in different parts of India in the use of tube-wells, etc. It might serve as an useful object lesson to use pumps and tube-wells for the provision of water at fairs, schools, hospitals and local public offices. In some localities, a tank supply alone is possible and the difficulty is to protect even new tanks from pollution.

(c) In several provinces, notably in Madras, village unions, or circles, have been formed and their committees entrusted with small grants for the improvement of the sanitation of the village site. This measure might be extended experimentally elsewhere. It is calculated to encourage discussion and inquiry regarding sanitary work

(d) Village midwives are, in some districts, encouraged by small grants of money and rewards to attend at the headquarters hospital for a short and simple course of training. These measures open up possibilities with reference to a reduction in infantile mortality and children's diseases generally.

(e) In most districts in India, the civil surgeon is also in theory the sanitary officer of the district. His duties at headquarters, however, do not allow him to tour and inspect in the district to the extent that is necessary : even in the case of epidemics in the district it is sometimes not possible for him to leave headquarters. In some provinces, district sanitary officers have been appointed and there can be little doubt that many more such appointments are required and that one of the most urgent and hopeful measures for promoting rural sanitation is the appointment of well-qualified and whole-time district health officers to control and organise all sanitary arrangements and experiments in the district.

Need for education.

47. The diffusion of sound education will, however, remain the most potent and penetrating instrument of sanitation among a population which still views it for the most part with hostility, or unconcern. The claims of hygiene as part of their educational policy were recognized by the Government of India in their educational resolution of the 21st February 1913. It may be hoped that before many years have passed educational institutions will have become missions of sanitation in their own vicinity and beyond. Meanwhile, some simple knowledge of the more common infectious diseases may with advantage be diffused. The difficulties are considerable and systematic organisation is required. The Indian branch of the St. John Ambulance Association has offered its valuable assistance In several provinces, pictorial leaflets are distributed and simple lantern lectures and demonstrations are given at fairs and other large gatherings, while in Bombay popular lectures to teachers, students and others have been organised by Major Glen Liston. The Indian Research Fund Association has decided to establish a central bureau where lanterns and lantern slides, pictures, and skeleton lectures can be stocked for issue on loan. Much may be done by utilising the services of municipal health officers and medical subordinates attached to travelling dispensaries and by enlisting the sympathies and active help of medical women, private medical practitioners, and private philanthropic agencies and persons. Sanitation must begin at home and as the Hon'ble Sir Pardey Lukis and Colonel Firth, the former on the civil, the latter on the military side, have pointed out, there will never be any real advance in domestic or personal hygiene until the women of the country realise its advantages and necessity. The encouragement of medical women to preach the gospel of health inside the zenana and to organise purdah parties for simple lantern demonstration lectures and the employment of nurse visitors as in Delhi, Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, are to be commended. Periodical local conferences and publications similar to that recently issued by the Bombay Government entitled "Some recent sanitary developments in the Bombay Presidency" are very useful and keep the question of sanitation before the public mind. Other methods for preparing people to combat preventible disease and premature mortality may suggest themselves. There is room for many workers in the sanitary field. The Governor-General in Council appeals with confidence to all who have interest in the well-being of India to join with him and the local Governments in a sustained endeavour to give effect to His Imperial Majesty's most gracious wish that the homes of his Indian subjects may be brightened and their labour sweetened by the spread of knowledge with all that follows in its train, a higher level of thought, of comfort and of health.

4. Members appointed by the local administration will be appointed triennially as nearly as possible at the same time.

5. All members shall hold office from the date of their notification by the local administration as members till the date of notification of their successors, unless the local administration otherwise directs.

(e) As to the registration of electors.

10. (1) On or before the first day of November preceding a general election the Secretary to the Municipality shall cause to be prepared a roll, called the electoral roll, in the form shown in Schedule B, of all persons entitled to be registered as electors. (2) The ballot box shall be so constructed that the ballot papers can be introduced therein but cannot be withdrawn therefrom without the box being unlocked.

(3) Just before the commencement of the poll the second returning officer shall show the ballot box empty to such persons as may be present at the polling station and shall then lock it and place his seal upon it in such manner as to prevent its being opened without breaking such seal and shall keep it so locked and sealed.

33. If a person representing himself to be a particular elector named on the electoral roll, applies for a ballot paper after another person has voted as such elector, the applicant shall, after duly answering such questions as the returning officer may ask, be entitled to mark a ballot paper in the same manner as any other voter, but the ballot paper (in these rules called a tendered ballot paper) shall be of a colour differing from the other ballot papers, and, instead of being put into the ballot box, shall be given to the first returning officer and endorsed by him with the name of the voter and his number on the electoral roll, and set aside in a separate packet, and shall not be counted by the returning officer. The signature or thumb impression of the voter shall not be made in the electoral roll as described in rule 30 (3) but shall be made in a separate list containing a copy of corresponding entry in the electoral roll and bearing the heading "Tendered votes list."

34. At the close of the poll in the presence of the persons nominated to assist the returning officer and of such candidates or their agents, if any, as may be in attendance, the returning officers shall:—

(d) Seal up in separate packets the tendered ballot papers, the ballot papers which they have admitted as valid and those which they have rejected as invalid, the electoral roll referred to in rule 30 (3) and the tendered votes list prescribed by rule 33 and record on each packet a description of its contents and the date of the election to which it relates; and

(e) Permit any candidate or his agent to take a copy of or an extract from the return mentioned in sub-section (c) above.

36. (1) The Deputy Commissioner shall retain for 3 months the packets of the ballot papers and lists forwarded to him by the returning officers, and shall then, unless there appear to him to be reason for retaining them for a further period cause them to be destroyed.

(b) A person shall be deemed to commit a corrupt practice within the meaning of these rules—

(ii) Who gives or procures or abets the giving of, a vote in the name of a voter who is not the person giving such vote.

And a corrupt practice shall be deemed to be committed by a candidate if the said corrupt practice is committed with his knowledge and consent.

Explanation :—A "Promise of individual profit" includes a promise for the benefit of the person himself, or of any one in whom he is interested.

41. Every petition against the return of any candidate at a Municipal election on the ground of corrupt practice or on any other ground shall be made in writing signed by a person who was a candidate at the election or by not less than five electors, and the petition shall be presented to the Deputy Commissioner within eight days of the publication by posting of the return at the Town Hall as prescribed in rule 35 ante. The petition shall specify the acts which the objectors allege to amount to corrupt practice or other material irregularity as affecting the result of the election, and which he or they are prepared to establish and shall on presentation be supported by a statement made on oath by each objector:

provided that on sufficient cause being shown the limit of eight days prescribed by this rule may be extended by the Deputy Commissioner.

42. (1) At the time of presenting an election petition or within three days afterwards the objector shall give security for all costs, charges, and expenses which may become payable by him to any witness summoned on his behalf, or to any respondent.

(2) The security shall be to such amount as the Deputy Commissioner may direct, and shall be given, either by a deposit of money or by recognizance entered into by not more than three sureties, or partly in one way and partly in the other.

The Deputy Commissioner may either immediately or after a summary enquiry reject the application after recording his reasons in writing for so doing, if he is not satisfied that there are grounds for further action on the petition.

43. If the Deputy Commissioner believes, after examining the objectors and making such enquiry as he deems fit, that any corrupt practice or other material irregularity has been committed in connection with the election of the respondent, he shall serve on the respondent a notice of the presentation of the petition, together with a copy of the petition, and shall summon him and in his presence make an enquiry regarding the corrupt practice or material irregularity alleged. The Deputy Commissioner shall, if necessary make an enquiry into the validity of the votes recorded in the circumstances described in rule 33.

44. (1) The enquiry shall be held in a place to which the public have free access, and notice of the time and place of enquiry shall be given to the parties not less than 7 days before the first day of the enquiry.

(2) The place of enquiry shall be within the Municipality, except that the Deputy Commissioner may, on being satisfied that special circumstances exist rendering it desirable that the enquiry should be held elsewhere, appoint some other convenient place for the enquiry.

45. When the respondent does not appear when the enquiry is instituted, then :—

(1) If it is proved that the summons was duly served, the officer holding the enquiry may proceed with the enquiry ex parte ;

(2) If it is not proved that the summons was duly served, the Deputy Commissioner shall direct a second summons to be issued and served on the respondent.

46. For the purpose of compelling the appearance of witnesses or the production of documents or other moveable property and of recording evidence, the officer holding the enquiry shall exercise the same powers as are exercisable by a District Magistrate under Chapters VI and VII of the Criminal Procedure Code of 1898.

47. The Deputy Commissioner shall make a record of all relevant evidence tendered, and shall, at the conclusion of the proceedings, draw up a report of what he believes to be the facts of the case, supported by the recorded evidence, and state his opinion whether the alleged corrupt practice or material irregularity has been committed in connection with the election of the respondent. If the Deputy Commissioner be satisfied that no case has been established against the return of the candidate whose election has been the subject of enquiry he shall record an order to this effect and declare his election valid If on the other hand, he believes that the allegation of corrupt practice or material irregularity has been established, he shall forward the proceedings with his report to the Chief Commissioner.

48. All costs, charges, and expenses of, and incidental to the presentation of the petition and the subsequent enquiry, shall be defrayed, by the parties concerned, in such manner and proportions as the Deputy Commissioner determines ; and in particular any costs, charges, or expenses which, in the opinion of the Deputy Commissioner, have been caused by vexatious conduct, unfounded allegations, or unfounded objections, on the part either of any objector or of the respondent, and any needless expenses incurred or caused on the part of any objector or the respondent, may be ordered to be defrayed by the parties by whom they have been incurred or caused.

49. Any costs awarded under these rules may be recovered from the security given under rule 42 or on application to a magistrate having jurisdiction within the limits of the Municipality, or in any other place where the person from whom the money is claimable may for the time being be resident, by the distress and sale of any moveable property within the limits of his jurisdiction belonging to such person.

50. If the Chief Commissioner, after a perusal of the proceedings, is of opinion that the charge of corrupt practice or allegation of a material irregularity has not been established, he may pass an order declaring the candidate duly elected. If, on the other hand, he finds that the charge or allegation has been established, he may declare the election void, and may further in the case of corrupt practice by a candidate order that the candidate shall be incapable of holding a Municipal Office for a period which may extend to ten years.

51. The Chief Commissioner may remand the proceedings to the Deputy Commissioner for further enquiry, if this be thought necessary, before passing a final order. Any party to the proceedings may claim, to be present in person or by counsel before the Chief Commissioner.

52. The Deputy Commissioner may, of his own motion make an enquiry regarding the conduct of any candidate whom he has reason to suspect of having committed any corrupt practice, in connection with his election, and the case shall be investigated and disposed of in the manner prescribed in these rules.

53. When under rule 50 the election of a candidate is declared void, the Chief Commissioner shall direct either that the unsuccessful candidate next following on the list be declared duly elected, or that a new election be held.

54. The validity of any election shall not be questioned on the ground that the name of any person qualified to vote has been omitted from, or the name of any person not qualified to vote has been inserted in, the electoral roll or rolls made and revised under the preceding rules.

55. If the election be declared void under rule 50 the person whose election was questioned shall, as from the date of the decision of the Chief Commissioner under that rule vacate his office as a member of the Committee.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA.

CALCUTTA, MAY 28, 1914.

Final General Memorandum on the Wheat Crop of the season 1913-14.

The figures given in the statement appended to this memorandum are based upon estimates furnished by the Agricultural Departments of all the wheat-growing provinces of any importance. These provinces contain 99·8 per cent of the total reported wheat acreage of India.

The seasonal conditions were favourable in the Punjab which contains over a third of the total wheat area of India. But the crop suffered much through drought in some of the important wheat-growing districts of the United Provinces, the Central Provinces, and the Bombay Presidency, as also in most of the Rajputana and Central India States. Elsewhere conditions were on the whole fair.

The total area sown comes to 27,699,000 acres, which is 6·2 per cent short of last year's area, but 1·3 per cent in excess of the average of the preceding five years. The total yield is estimated at 8,385,000 tons which falls short of last year's revised figure (9,715,000) by nearly 14 per cent, and of the quinquennial average by 2 per cent.

In addition to the areas for which particulars are given above, the crop is grown in certain other tracts for which no reports are made, and the average area so grown for the last five years has been some 50,000 acres. An addition of approximately 0·2 per cent should be made to the estimated total yield on this account.

The exports of wheat from British India to foreign countries by sea during the last five years have been :—

	Tons.
1909-10	1,050,574
1910-11	1,266,151
1911-12	1,361,166
1912-13	1,060,187
1913-14	1,202,205

The vicissitudes of the export trade in wheat resulting from the seasonal conditions on which the harvest is dependent, are remarkable.

Column 14 of the appended statement shows the ratio of retail prices at 30th April 1914 to average of five years ending 1912 at the same date.

The provincial reports are summarised below. The figures in brackets following the name of each province indicate what percentage of the total area under wheat in India is ordinarily cultivated in that province.

A

Punjab (34 %).—Except in the south-east dry area, the season has turned out exceptionally favourable for the maturing of the wheat crop, and unless it is damaged on the threshing floor, the quality of the grain will be excellent. The total area (9,384,000 acres) reported to have been sown in the whole province (including Native States) shows an increase of 0·7 per cent over last year's area. The total yield is estimated at 3,428,000 tons which is nearly 15 per cent larger than last year.

United Provinces (22·6 %).—The autumn rains were very scanty except in the eastern districts. The months of October and November were practically rainless. Light rain fell in December, but over large parts of the province it was too small in amount to be of much value to the crop. January was rainless except in certain districts in the south and east of the province. Rain in February and March, however, proved of considerable benefit to the crop. Owing to insufficient moisture in the soil at sowing time, particularly in the southern and western districts, a restricted area was placed under the crop, the total reported area (6,373,000 acres) being some 14 per cent below last year's area. In the eastern districts the crop escaped serious injury from the prolonged drought. Over the rest of the province, the irrigated crop has been satisfactory; but the unirrigated crop was damaged by drought except in low lying areas, and its outturn has been generally poor and the grain shrivelled. The total yield is estimated at 2,205,000 tons which is 25 per cent below last year.

Central Provinces and Berar (11·6 %).—In the greater part of the Provinces the seed-bed was not sufficiently moist at the time of sowing, and the area sown was consequently much restricted. Germination was only moderate, and in parts of some of the important wheat-growing districts it was poor. Good rain in December greatly benefited the crop, which having been sown early, had suffered from the strong November sun. This rain was not heavy enough to prevent considerable damage from white ants in several districts, and drought also did considerable damage in places. The harvest was early and in some districts sufficiently early to forestall a series of storms of rain and hail which took place at the end of February and beginning of March in the north of the Provinces. Fortunately the hail was local and the rain did but little harm to the crop. The total area returned—3,383,000 acres—is some 10 per cent below last year, and the yield is estimated at only 683,000 tons which is nearly 36 per cent short of last year's yield.

Bombay (6%).—In Gujarat and Karnatak water supply was sufficient at sowing time, and the area was extended. In the Deccan, on the other hand, cultivation had to be restricted owing to deficient late rains. The total area sown in the Presidency proper (including Baroda) is reported to be 1,789,000 acres which is 3 per cent above last year. December was practically rainless, and there was no rain in subsequent months except a few partial showers in January and February in parts of North Deccan. The crop in Gujarat throve well at first, but later on it suffered from attacks of rats and insects. In parts of East and South Deccan the crop suffered through deficient moisture. The total yield is estimated at 444,000 tons which falls short of last year's yield by 18 per cent.

Sind (1·7%).—The water supply was deficient in many places. The total area sown is reported to be 481,000 acres which is 1·2 per cent below last year. The yield is estimated at 114,000 tons which is 44 per cent short of last year's yield.

Bihar and Orissa (4·5%).—The weather conditions were favourable throughout the season. The total area (1,342,000 acres) shows an increase of nearly 6 per cent as compared with last year. The total yield is estimated at 583,000 tons, which is 10 per cent above last year's yield.

North-West Frontier Province (3·8%).—The season has been generally favourable, due to timely and sufficient rainfall which encouraged large sowings on unirrigated area and helped the crops to mature. The total yield is estimated at 259,000 tons on an area of 992,000 acres. These figures indicate an increase of 33 per cent in yield and 13 per cent in area.

Bengal (0·5%).—The season in the chief wheat-growing districts has on the whole been fair. The estimate of area shows a decrease of 1·4 per cent as compared with last year, but the estimate of yield is the same as last year, namely, 51,000 tons.

Ajmer-Merwara (0·1%).—This is the first time that a report on the wheat crop has been received from Ajmer-Merwara. The area is reported to be 5,000 acres and the yield 2,000 tons.

Central India (7·9%).—The total area sown (excluding that in the Bundelkhand and Baghelkhand States from which returns have not been received) falls short of last year's area by 9·7 per cent. The yield is estimated at 466,000 tons which is 50 per cent below last year.

Hyderabad (3·7%).—The area sown (702,000 acres) shows a decrease of 17·5 per cent, and the estimated yield (43,000 tons) a decrease of 10·4 per cent, as compared with last year.

Rajputana (3·4%).—The total area sown (excluding that in the Jaipur and Jhalawar States for which returns have not been received) is 37 per cent short of last year's area. The estimated yield is 52 per cent less than last year's yield.

Mysore (0·01%) reports 3,000 acres and 1,000 tons as compared with 4,000 acres and 1,000 tons last year.

Provided that the diameter of the cartridge in either case (i) or case (ii) does not exceed one inch.

(13) "Safety fuze" means a fuze for blasting which burns and does not explode, and which does not contain its own means of ignition, and which is of such strength and construction, and contains an explosive in such quantity, that the burning of such fuze would not communicate laterally with other like fuzes.

SCHEDULE I.

PRESCRIBED TESTS.

[Vide rule 16.]

I.—Heat Test as applied to Explosives of the Nitro-compound Class.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS.

Apparatus required.

1. A water bath, consisting of a spherical glass or copper vessel [(a) Fig. I] of about 8 inches diameter, and with an aperture of about 5 inches; the bath is filled with water to within a quarter of an inch of the edge It has a loose cover of sheet copper about 6 inches in diameter (b), and rests on a tripod stand about 14 inches high (c), which is covered with coarse iron wire gauze (e), and is surrounded with a screen of thin sheet tin or copper (d). Within the latter is placed an Argand burner (f), with glass chimney. The cover (b) has four holes arranged as seen in Fig. II, No. 4 to receive the regulator, No. 3 the thermometer, Nos. 1 and 2 the test-tubes containing the gun-cotton or other materials to be tested. Around holes 1 and 2 on the under side of the cover are soldered three pieces of brass wire with points slightly converging (Fig. III); these act as springs and allow the test-tubes to be easily placed in position and removed.

Fig. I.

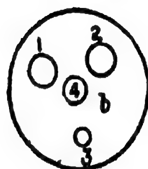

Fig. III

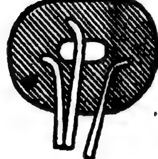

Fig. IV.

* 2. Scheibler's or Page's temperature regulator.

* 3. Two cells of Le Clanché's battery No. 1 } if Scheibler's regulator is used.
* 4. A few yards of insulated copper wire }

5. Test-tubes from 5¼ to 5¼ inches long, and of such diameter that they will hold from 20 to 22 cubic centimetres of water when filled to a height of 5 inches.

6. India-rubber stoppers, fitting the test-tubes and carrying an arrangement for holding the test-paper, viz., a narrow glass tube passing through the centre of the stopper, drawn out so as to form a hook, or terminating in a platinum wire hook (Fig. IV).

7. A thermometer, with range not less than from 30° to 212° Fahrenheit.

8. A minute clock.

Materials required.

(a) Test-paper.—The test-paper is prepared as follows :—45 grains of white maize starch (cornflour), previously washed with cold water, are added to 8½ ounces of distilled water; the mixture is stirred, heated to boiling, and kept gently boiling for 10 minutes; 15 grains of pure potassium iodide (i.e., which has been re-crystallized from alcohol) are dissolved in 8½ ounces of distilled water. The two solutions are thoroughly mixed and allowed to get cold. Strips, or sheets, of best white English filter paper, weighing air dry, from 4·1 to 4·6 grammes per 100 square inches, previously washed with water and re-dried, are dipped into the solution thus prepared, and allowed to remain in it for not less than 10 seconds; they are then allowed to drain and dry in a place free from laboratory fumes and dust. The upper and lower margins of the strips, or sheets, are cut off, and the paper is preserved in well-stoppered or corked bottles and in the dark. † The dimensions of the pieces of test-paper used are about $\frac{4}{10}$ inch by $\frac{8}{10}$ inch (10 mm. by 20 mm.).

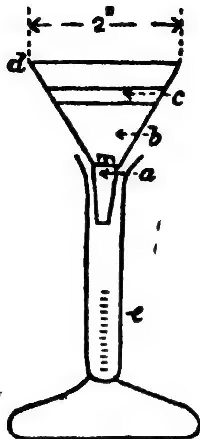
(b) Standard tint-paper.—A solution of caramel in water is made of such concentration that when diluted one hundred times (10 cc. made up to 1 litre) the tint of this diluted solution equals the tint produced by the Nessler test in 100 cc. water containing 0·000075 grm. of ammonia or 0·0002355 grm. of chloride of ammonium. With this caramel solution lines are drawn on strips of white filter paper‡ by means of a clean quill pen. When the marks thus produced are dry the paper is cut into pieces of the same size as the test-paper previously described, in such a way that each piece has a brown line across it near the middle of its length, and only such strips are preserved in which the brown line has a breadth varying from ½ mm. to 1 mm. ($\frac{1}{50}$ of an inch to $\frac{1}{25}$ of an inch).

II.—Testing Dynamite, Blasting Gelatine, and other Explosives of the First Division of the Nitro-compound Class.

A.—DYNAMITE, ETC., ETC.

Nitro-glycerine preparations, from which the nitro-glycerine can be extracted in the manner described below, must satisfy the following test.

This test, however, though at present looked upon as the most important, as far as testing the purity of the nitro-glycerine is concerned, is in England only one of several which any given sample of nitro-glycerine preparation has to satisfy in order to establish its compliance with the definition in the Authorised List.



* This is not absolutely required, as the temperature of the bath can be kept constant by proper attention to the heating flame.

† When a paper is freshly prepared, and as long as it remains in good condition a drop of dilute acetic acid, put on the paper with a glass rod, produces no coloration. In process of time, however, the stronger the light to which the paper is exposed, the sooner a drop of acid produces a brown or bluish coloration (a single hour of direct sunlight produces a marked effect), and whenever this is the case the paper should be rejected. After preparation the paper should be kept in the dark for a month before being taken into use. After that, if carefully kept in the dark, it will remain good for 6 months or more, but should be tested from time to time as above.

‡ This paper must be carefully washed with distilled water in the first instance, to remove any traces of bleaching matter, and dried.

Apparatus required.

A funnel 2 inches across (d), a cylindrical measure divided into grains (e) (See sketch).

Mode of operation.

About 300 to 400 grains of dynamite (b) finely divided are placed into the funnel which has previously been loosely plugged by some freshly-ignited asbestos (a).

The surface is smoothed by means of a flat-headed glass rod or stopper, and some clean washed and dried Kieselguhr (c) is spread over it to the depth of about ⅛ inch.

Water is next carefully dropped from a wash bottle upon this Kieselguhr, and when the first portion has been soaked up more is added; this is repeated until sufficient nitro-glycerine has been collected in the graduated measure (e) below.

If any water should have passed through with the nitro-glycerine, it should be removed with a piece of blotting paper, and the nitro-glycerine, if necessary, filtered through a dry paper filter.

Application of the Test.

The thermometer is fixed so as to be inserted through the lid of the water bath described under I, into the water (which is to be steadily maintained at a temperature of 160° Fahr.*) to a depth of 2¾ inches. Fifty grains of nitro-glycerine to be tested are weighed into a test-tube in such a way as not to soil the sides of the tube. A test paper is fixed on the hook of the glass rod so that when inserted into the tube it will be in a vertical position. A sufficient amount of a mixture of half distilled water and half glycerine to moisten the upper half of the paper is now applied to the upper edge of the test-paper by means of a camel's-hair pencil, the cork carrying the rod and paper is fixed into the test-tube and the position of the paper adjusted, so that its lower edge is about half-way down the tube; the latter is then inserted through one of the perforations of the cover to such a depth that the lower margin of the moistened part of the paper is about five-eighths of an inch above the surface of the cover. The test is complete when the faint brown line, which after a time makes its appearance at the line of boundary between the dry and moist part of the paper, equals in tint the brown line of the standard tint paper.

The nitro-glycerine under examination will not be considered to have satisfied the test unless the time necessary to produce the standard tint as above described is at least 15 minutes.

B.—BLASTING GELATINE, GELATINE DYNAMITE, AND ANALOGOUS PREPARATIONS.

Fifty (50) grains of blasting gelatine are to be intimately incorporated with one hundred (100) grains of French chalk.† The mixture is to be gradually introduced into a test-tube of the dimensions prescribed above for the dynamite heat test, with the aid of gentle tapping upon the table, between the introduction of successive portions of the mixture into the tube, so that when the tube contains all the mixture it shall be filled to the extent of 1¾ inches (one inch and three-quarters) of its height. The test-paper is then to be inserted and the heat is to

* For explosives supplied for His Majesty's Military and Naval Services the temperature is fixed by the War Office at 180°.

† This can be readily effected by carefully working the two materials together with a wooden pestle in a wooden mortar.

The French chalk should be of good commercial quality, and, after being carefully washed with distilled water and dried in a water oven, it should be exposed under a bell jar to moist air until it has taken up about 0·5 per cent of moisture. It should then be bottled for use; and with ordinary care the limits of 0·5 per cent can be maintained in keeping.

be applied in the manner prescribed above for the dynamite heat test, and the sample tested is to withstand exposure to 160° Fahr. for a period of ten (10) minutes, before producing a discoloration of the test-papers corresponding in tint to the standard colour test which is employed for governing the results of the dynamite heat tests.

(For Exudation and Liquefaction tests for Blasting Gelatine, etc., etc., see Appendix.)

N.B.—Non-gelatinized nitro-glycerine preparations from which the nitro-glycerine cannot be expelled by water, are tested without any previous separation of the ingredients, the temperature being as above (160° Fahr.) and the time being seven (7) minutes.

C.—CORDITE AND BALLISTITE.

1. Apparatus required.

The apparatus necessary for the application of the heat test to cordite is identical with that described above for explosives of the nitro-compound class generally* with the addition of a mill and a nest of sieves† similar to those used at Waltham Abbey for preparing the cordite for testing (see instructions below).

2. Preparation of the sample to be tested.

Pieces half an inch long are cut from one end of every stick selected for the test; in the case of the thicker cordites, each piece so cut is further sub-divided into about four portions. These cut pieces are then passed once through the mill, the first portion of material which passes through being rejected on account of the possible presence of foreign matter from the mill. The ground material is put on the top sieve of the nest of sieves and sifted. The portion which has passed through the top sieve and been stopped by the second is taken for the test. If the mill is properly set the greater portion of the ground material will be of the proper size.

If the volatile matter in the explosive exceed 0·5 per cent the sifted material should be dried at a temperature not exceeding 140° Fahr. until the proportion does not exceed 0·5 per cent.

After each sample has been ground, the mill must be taken to pieces and carefully cleaned.

3. Application of the Test.

The thermometer is fixed so as to be inserted through the lid of the water bath described under paragraph 1, so as to be immersed in the water to a depth of 2¾ inches. The water is maintained at a constant temperature of 180° Fahr. When this temperature is reached, 25 grains of the sifted cordite are put into one of the test-tubes, and collected at the bottom by gentle tapping. A test paper is fixed on to the hook of the glass rod, so that when inserted into the tube it will be in a vertical position. A mixture of equal parts of distilled water and pure glycerine (Price's) is now applied to the upper edge of the test paper by means of a camel's-hair pencil, in sufficient amount to moisten the upper half; the stopper carrying the rod and paper is fixed into the test-tube and the position of the paper adjusted so that its lower edge is about half-way down the tube; the latter is then inserted through one of the perforations of the cover to the same depth as the thermometer. The lower margin of the moistened part of the paper should then be about five-eighths of an inch above the surface of the cover. The test is completed when the faint brown line, which after a time makes its appearance at the margin between the wet and dry portions of the test-paper, equals in depth of tint the brown line drawn on the standard tint paper.

4 The time which elapses between the insertion of the test-tube and the completion of the test must not be less than 15 minutes.

* In the Waltham Abbey apparatus the cover (Fig. II) has all the holes around the circumference instead of having one in the centre and three around the circumference.

† A nest of two sieves with the holes drilled in sheet copper. The holes in the top sieve have a diameter = 14 B. W. G., those in the second = 21 B. W. G.

If too hard for the mill, it may be softened by exposure to the vapour of acetone, or reduced to the necessary degree of sub-division by means of a sharp moderately coarse rasp. Should it have become too soft in the acetone vapour for the mill, it should be cut up into small pieces which may be brought to any desired degree of hardness by simple exposure to air.

Explosives which consist partly of gelatinized collodion cotton and partly of ungelatinized gun-cotton are best reduced to powder by a rasp, or softened by exposure to mixed ether and alcohol vapour at a temperature of 90° to 100° Fahr.

N. B.—In the case of ballistite the treatment is the same except that when it is in a very finely granulated condition it need not be cut up.

III.—Testing Gun-cotton, Schultz's Gun Powder, E. C. Powder, and other explosives of the 2nd Division of the Nitro-compound Class.

A.—COMPRESSED NITRO-CELLULOSE, TONITE, ETC., ETC.

Sufficient material to serve for two or more tests is removed from the centre of the cartridge by gentle scraping, and, if necessary, further reduced by rubbing through a sieve with a clean hard brush.

The fine powder thus produced is spread out in a thin layer upon a paper tray 6 inches by 4½ inches which is then placed inside a water oven, kept, as nearly as possible, at 120° Fahr.

The wire gauze shelves in the oven should be about 3 inches apart. The sample is allowed to remain at rest for 15 minutes in the oven, the door of which is left wide open.

After the lapse of 15 minutes the tray is removed and exposed to the air of the room for two hours, the sample being at some point within that time rubbed upon the tray with a brush, in order to reduce it to a fine and uniform state of division.

Application of the Test.

The cover of the water bath is fitted with the gas regulator which is inserted through the centre hole (No. 4). The thermometer is fixed into hole No. 3. The water in the bath is then heated to 170° Fahr., and the regulator set to maintain that temperature. Twenty grains of the sample to be tested are weighed out, placed in the test tube, and gently pressed down until the specimen occupies a space of not more than 1$\frac{7}{10}$ inches in a test-tube of the dimensions specified. A test-paper is affixed to the hook of the glass rod or tube, and moistened by touching the upper edge with a drop of distilled water containing 50 per cent. of Price's glycerine. The quantity of liquid used must be only sufficient to moisten about half of the paper. The cork carrying the rod and test-paper is then fixed into the test-tube, and the latter inserted into the bath to a depth of 2½ inches, measured from the cover, the regulator and thermometer being inserted to the same depth. The test-paper is to be kept near the top of the test-tube, but clear of the cork, until the tube has been immersed for about five minutes. A ring of moisture will about this time be deposited upon the sides of the test-tube a little above the cover of the bath; the glass rod must then be lowered until the lower margin of the moistened part of the paper is on a level with the bottom of the ring of moisture in the tube; the paper is now closely watched. The test is complete when the faint brown line which makes its appearance at the line of boundary between the dry and moist parts of the paper, equals in tint the brown line of the standard tint paper.

The interval of time between the first insertion of the tube containing the sample of gun-cotton in the water at 170° and the production of the standard tint constitutes the test, and this interval of time must be not less than 10 minutes, or the sample will not be considered to have satisfied the test.

B.—GELATINIZED AND SEMI-GELATINIZED NITRO-CELLULOSE PREPARATIONS.*

Twenty-five grains introduced into the test-tube* of the dimensions prescribed for the dynamite heat test, then proceed as for blasting gelatine, etc, taking the temperature at 180° Fahr, and the time as 15 minutes.

C.—NITRO-CELLULOSE NOT INCLUDED IN A. OR B., SCHULTZ'S POWDER, E. C. POWDER, ETC., ETC.

Sufficient of the sample, without further mechanical division, is dried in the oven as above, and then exposed for two hours to the air. The test as directed above for compressed nitro-cellulose, etc., is then applied, the minimum duration of test being the same, viz., 10 minutes.

D.—PICRIC ACID.

(1) The material shall contain not more than 0·3 part of mineral or non-combustible matter in 100 parts by weight of the material dried at 160° Fahr.

* If in a compressed form it should be broken up in the same manner as cordite and ballistite.

(2) It should not contain more than a minute trace of lead.

(3) One hundred parts of the dry material shall not contain more than 0·3 part of total (free and combined) sulphuric acid, of which not more than 0·1 part shall be free sulphuric acid.

(4) Its melting point should be between 248° and 253° Fahr.

E.—AMMONITE, BELLITE, ROBURITE, AND EXPLOSIVES OF SIMILAR COMPOSITION.

These are required to stand the same heat test as compressed nitro-cellulose.

IV.—Testing Chlorate-Mixtures.

The material must not be too sensitive* and must show no tendency to increase in sensitiveness on keeping.

The material must contain nothing liable to reduce the chlorate.

Chlorides calculated as potassium chloride must not exceed 0·25 per cent.

The material must contain no free acid, or substance liable to produce free acid.

Explosives of this Class containing nitro-compounds will be subject to the heat test as if they belonged to Class III.

V.—Testing Ammunition (Divisions 2 and 3).

Any explosive made up into ammunition (other than Division 1), for which a test is provided in the schedule, is to be tested as if not so made up.

APPENDIX.

Exudation and Liquefaction Test for Blasting Gelatine, Gelatine Dynamite and analogous Preparations.

TEST FOR LIQUEFACTION.

A cylinder of blasting gelatine is to be cut from the cartridge to be tested, the length of the cylinder to be about equal to its diameter and the ends being cut flat.

The cylinder is to be placed on end on a flat surface without any wrapper, and secured by a pin passing vertically through its centre.

In this condition the cylinder is to be exposed for one hundred and forty-four (144) consecutive hours (six days and nights) to a temperature ranging from 85° to 90° Fahr. (inclusive), and during such exposure the cylinder shall not diminish in height by more than one-fourth of its original height, and the upper cut surface shall retain its flatness and the sharpness of its edge.

Note.—If the blasting gelatine and the gelatine dynamite to be tested be not made up in a cylindrical form, the above test is to be applied with the necessary modifications.

TEST FOR LIABILITY TO EXUDATION.

There shall be no separation from the general mass of the blasting gelatine or gelatine dynamite of a substance of less consistency than the bulk of the remaining portion of the materials under any conditions of storage, transport, or use, or when the material is subjected three times in succession to alternate freezing and thawing, or when subjected to the liquefaction test hereinbefore described.

* They will be considered too sensitive if they can be exploded however partially by means of a glancing blow with a broomstick on soft wood (such as deal)

2. The licensee shall keep records and accounts of all explosives manufactured, of all stock in hand, and of all sales, in such form as the Local Government may from time to time direct.

3. The licensee shall exhibit his stock and his books and records of manufacture and sales to any Magistrate or to any Police Officer duly empowered in this behalf, whenever such Magistrate or officer may call upon him so to do:

Provided that where the license extends only to the manufacture, possession and sale of manufactured fireworks and the quantity permitted to be kept at one time does not exceed fifty pounds, the licensee shall not be required to keep or exhibit records or accounts of the same.

4. (1) The explosive shall be manufactured in a tent or lightly constructed building exclusively appropriated for the purpose and separated from any dwelling-house, highway, street, public thoroughfare or public place by the distance—

(a) in the case of gunpowder or small-arm nitro-compound, of one hundred yards, or

(b) in the case of an explosive of the 1st Division of the 6th (Ammunition) Class, or of the 7th (Firework) Class, of fifty yards.

(2) In the case of filling cartridges for small-arms the operation may, if preferred, be carried out in the upper room of a building to which the conditions in clause (1) as to distance need not apply:

Provided that no more than five pounds of explosive (except such as may be contained in safety cartridges) shall be in the room where the operation is being carried on.

(3) In all other cases the manufacture shall be carried on in a one-storeyed building.

5. The number of persons employed at any one time in manufacture in any one building or room shall not exceed six, and only persons actually manufacturing or superintending manufacture shall be allowed inside the place of manufacture.

6. No iron or steel implements shall be used in manufacture. Only copper, gun-metal or wooden tools are permissible.

7. All explosives, as manufactured, shall be removed without delay to a safe place of storage, and no explosive shall be allowed to accumulate in the place of manufacture.

8. Manufacture shall only be carried on between sunrise and sunset.

9. No smoking or lights shall be allowed in or near a room where explosives are being manufactured.

10. All sales of explosives under this license must be effected on the premises shown on the face of the license.

11. An explosive shall not be sold to any child apparently under the age of fourteen years, nor shall any child under that age be employed in manufacture.

12. (1) The explosives possessed by the licensee shall be kept in one or other or both of the following modes:—

Mode A, that is to say, in a building or excavation, which is detached from any dwelling-house, and is separated by the distances prescribed in condition No. 4* from any highway, street, public thoroughfare or public place, and is made and closed so as to prevent unauthorised persons from having access thereto and to secure it from danger from without, and is exclusively appropriated to keeping explosives: and

(a) such a building must be substantially constructed of brick, stone or concrete, or must be a securely constructed fireproof safe; and

(b) such an excavation must be formed in solid rock, or earth, or in mine refuse not liable to ignition, and must not open into, from or out of any mine, quarry, tunnel or underground place which is in use for the carrying on of any work or for the employment of any person.

Mode B, that is to say, in a substantial receptacle (whether or not a fireproof safe) which is closed and secured so as to prevent unauthorised persons from having access thereto, and is exclusively appropriated to the keeping of explosives, and is placed inside a dwelling-house, or inside a building which is not itself qualified for the keeping of explosives in Mode A:

Provided that a fireproof safe shall not be used for the keeping of any explosive other than gunpowder or small-arm nitro-compound and cartridges of the 2nd Division of the 6th (Ammunition) Class (not containing their own means of ignition) and made with gunpowder or small-arm nitro-compound, such as cartridges or charges for cannon or blasting purposes.

13. The maximum quantity of explosives allowed to be kept at the same time shall be the following:—

(1) if the only explosive kept be one or more of the following, namely:—

(a) gunpowder;

(b) small-arm nitro-compound; or

(c) ammunition of the 1st Division of the 6th Class, the maximum shall be—

	In Mode A. lbs.	In Mode B. lbs.
gunpowder and small-arm nitro-compound, in all	Two hundred.	Fifty.
and, in addition, of explosives contained in ammunition of the 1st Division of the 6th Class	Any quantity.	Any quantity.

(2) if the only explosive kept be manufactured fireworks, the maximum shall be—manufactured fireworks	Two hundred.	Fifty.

(3) in any other case the maximum shall be—mixed explosives, including gunpowder, small-arm nitro-compound and manufactured fireworks, etc., in all ...	Sixty.	Fifteen.

and, in addition, of explosives contained in ammunition of the 1st Division of the 6th Class	Any quantity.	Any quantity.

Provided that in each of the three cases above-mentioned the aggregate quantity kept on the premises in Mode A and Mode B together may not in any case exceed the maximum quantity which may be kept in Mode A.

14. With respect to a building or excavation used in Mode A, and a receptacle used in Mode B—

(a) the interior thereof, and the shelves and fittings therein, shall be so constructed, or so lined and covered, as to prevent the exposure of any iron or steel, or the detaching of any grit, iron or steel or similar substance, in such manner as to come into contact with the explosive;

and such interior, shelves and fittings shall, so far as is reasonably practicable, be kept free from grit and otherwise clean;

(b) in the case of any explosive being possessed which is liable to be dangerously affected by water, due precautions shall be taken to exclude water therefrom;

(c) all articles or substances of an explosive or highly inflammable nature, and all lights, shall be kept at a safe distance from the explosive, and from any room or part of a building, excavation or receptacle containing the same; and

* These distances may be reduced to one-half when the building is surrounded by a traverse as high as the eaves of the building.

(d) no person in any such room or part of a building or any such excavation, or any such receptacle, shall have any iron or steel in his possession, or attached to or on his boots or shoes :

Provided that this condition, so far as it relates to the exposure of iron or steel or similar substances, shall not be obligatory in the case where no explosive is kept other than ammunition of the 1st Division of the 6th (Ammunition) Class.

15. Any quantity exceeding five pounds of an explosive of the 1st Division of the 6th (Ammunition) Class or of the 2nd Division of the 7th (Firework) Class, and of any other explosive exceeding one pound, shall be kept in a substantial case, bag, canister or other receptacle, made and closed so as to prevent the explosives from escaping; and, when publicly exposed for sale or when sold, the outermost receptacle containing such explosives shall have affixed the name of the explosives in conspicuous characters by means of a brand or securely-attached label or other mark :

Provided that two samples of each kind of firework may be exposed for sale without complying with the foregoing clauses of this condition, if such samples be placed in such a position that no light or fire is, or is likely to be, brought near them.

16. (1) Explosives of different descriptions which may be kept under this license, shall be separated by an intervening partition of such substance and character, or by such intervening space, as will effectually prevent explosion or fire in the one communicating with the other :

(2) Provided as follows:—

(a) Gunpowder, small-arm nitro-compound and safety fuzes belonging to the 1st Division of the 6th (Ammunition) Class may be kept with each other without any intervening partition or space ;

(b) the various explosives of the 1st Division of the 6th (Ammunition) Class may be kept with each other without any intervening partition or space ;

(a) the name and address of the person who takes delivery of the articles sold;

(b) the nature and amount of articles sold ; and

(c) the date of sale :

and shall append his signature to the endorsement.

Provided that this condition shall not be obligatory in a magazine in which no explosive other than an explosive of the 1st Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class is kept.

11. Due provision shall be made, by the use of suitable working clothes without pockets, or of suitable shoes, or by searching or otherwise, or by some such means, for preventing the introduction into the magazine of fire, lucifer matches or any substance or article likely to cause explosion or fire, or of any grit, iron or steel; but this rule shall not prevent the introduction of an artificial light of such construction, position or character as not to cause any danger of fire or explosion:

Provided that so much of this condition as applies to the exclusion of grit, iron or steel, shall not be obligatory in a building in which no explosive other than an explosive of the first Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class is kept.

12. No person shall smoke in any part of the magazine.

13. No person under the age of fourteen years shall be employed in or enter the magazine, except in the presence and under the supervision of some grown up person, and no explosive shall be sold to any such person.

14. (1) Two or more descriptions of explosives which may lawfully be possessed in a licensed magazine may be possessed in the same magazine if they are separated from each other by an intervening partition of such substance and character, or by such intervening space, as will effectually prevent explosion or fire in the one communicating with the other:

(2) Provided as follows:—

(a) the various explosives of Classes 1 (gunpowder), 2 (nitrate-mixture), 3 (nitro-compound) and 4 (chlorate-mixture), safety fuzes belonging to the 1st Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class, and such of the various explosives of the 2nd Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class as do not contain any exposed iron or steel, may be kept with each other without any intervening partition or space;

(b) the various explosives of the 1st Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class may be kept with each other without any intervening partition or space;

(c) such of the various explosives of the 2nd Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class as contain any exposed iron or steel, may be kept with each other without any intervening partition or space;

(d) the various explosives of the 3rd Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class may be kept with each other without any intervening partition or space;

(e) the various explosives of the 7th (firework) Class may be kept with each other without any intervening partition or space.

(3) Save as aforesaid, two or more descriptions of explosives shall not be kept in the same magazine.

15. The licensee, and every person employed in or about the magazine, shall take all due precautions for the prevention of accidents by fire or explosion in the magazine, and for preventing unauthorised persons from having access to the magazine or to the explosives therein, and shall abstain from any act whatever which tends to cause fire or explosion and is not reasonably necessary for the purpose of the work in such magazine.

16. (1) Blasting gelatine or any of its kindred gelatinous nitro-compounds shall not be kept in the magazine after the expiration of three years from the date of its, or their, importation into British India, except with the special sanction of an Inspector of Explosives.

(2) When such sanction has been given, a written certificate, showing the period covered by the sanction, must be obtained from an Inspector of Explosives at each inspection, and must be kept by the licensee at the magazine.

17. The licensee shall, at his own expense, provide for the safe custody of the magazine, a guard which shall be of such strength as the District Magistrate or the Commissioner of Police, as the case may be, may consider to be sufficient.

18. All losses, shortage of stock and thefts of explosives shall be reported without delay to the nearest police-station.

Conditions.

[IV of 1884.] 1. This license is granted subject to the provisions of the Indian Explosives Act, 1884, and the rules thereunder.

2. The whole vessel, barge or craft in or on board which the explosives are stored shall be deemed to constitute the magazine.

3. The magazine shall be used only for the keeping of such explosives as may be specified in the license, and of receptacles for, or tools or implements for work connected with, the keeping of such explosives.

4. The interior of the magazine, and the benches, shelves and fittings therein, shall be so constructed or so lined or covered as to prevent the exposure of any iron or steel in such manner, and the detaching of any grit, iron, steel or similar substance in such manner, as to come into contact with the explosives in such magazine; and such interior, benches, shelves and fittings shall, so far as is reasonably practicable, be kept free from grit and otherwise clean.

5. The magazine shall have attached thereto an efficient lightning conductor, which shall be tested previous to the storage of explosives.

6. No charcoal, whether ground or otherwise, oiled cotton, oiled rags or oiled waste and no article whatever which is liable to spontaneous ignition, shall be taken into the magazine.

7. Before repairs are done to or in any part of the magazine, it shall, so far as practicable, be cleaned by the removal of all explosives, and by a thorough washing out. After being so cleaned, it shall not be deemed to be a magazine until explosives are again taken into it.

8. There shall be constantly kept in the magazine, affixed in such manner as to be easily read, a copy of the license, and of any special rules that may be issued from time to time for the keeping of explosives in a floating magazine.

9. All tools and implements used in any repairs to or in any part of the magazine shall be made only of wood or copper or brass or some soft metal or material, or shall be covered with some safe and suitable material.

10. No fires, lights or lucifer matches, and no substance or article which is likely to cause explosion or fire, shall be permitted to be at any time in the magazine.

11. Due provision shall be made, by the use of suitable working clothes without pockets, or of suitable shoes, or by searching or otherwise, or by some such means, for preventing the introduction into the magazine of fire, lucifer matches or any substance or article which is likely to cause explosion or fire; and for preventing the introduction of any grit, iron or steel into any part of the magazine where it would be likely to come into contact with explosives; and in any part of the magazine in which any explosive is kept which is liable to be dangerously affected by water, due precautions shall be taken to exclude water from such part; but this condition shall not prevent the introduction of an artificial light of such construction, position or character as not to cause any danger of fire or explosion; and so much of this condition as relates to the exclusion of grit, iron or steel shall not be obligatory in the case of a magazine in which no explosive other than explosives of the 1st Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class is kept.

12. No person shall smoke in any part of the magazine.

13. (1) The licensee shall not employ any vessel, barge or craft to carry an explosive to or from the magazine unless the cabin, hold or other part of the vessel, barge or craft in which the explosive is or is to be carried—

(a) is constructed without any exposed iron or steel in the interior thereof,

(b) contains only explosives, and

(c) is closed or otherwise properly covered over:

Provided that clause (a) shall not apply in the case of any vessel, barge or craft which carries no explosive other than explosives of the 1st Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class, or which is specially exempted by an order of the Chief Inspector of Explosives or by an order of the Local Government endorsed on this license.

(2) The licensee shall see that the explosives to be placed on any vessel, barge or craft so employed are loaded, carried and unloaded with all due diligence and with such precautions and in such manner as will sufficiently guard against any accidental ignition.

14. The licensee shall see—

(a) that no fire, unprotected light or smoking is allowed while any explosive [other than explosives of the 1st Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class] is being received or delivered, or while the hatches or door of the magazine, or the hatches or coverings of any vessel, barge or craft alongside containing any such explosive, are open; and

(b) that no receipt or delivery of explosive is carried on, and that the hatches or door of the magazine are or is kept closed, when any vessel, barge or craft having on board a fire (other than engine-fires properly banked up) or an unprotected light is alongside a magazine containing an explosive other than explosives of the 1st Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class or in its immediate vicinity.

15. A person under the age of fourteen years shall not be employed in or enter the magazine, except in the presence and under the supervision of some grown-up person.

16. In the case of the magazine being approachable at low water by carriages, the words "vessel, barge, or craft," in Nos. 13 and 14 of these conditions, shall be taken to include a carriage.

17. (1) Two or more descriptions of explosives, which may lawfully be possessed in a licensed magazine, may be possessed in the same magazine, if they are separated from each other by an intervening partition of such substance and character, or by such intervening space, as will effectually prevent explosion or fire in one compartment from extending to another compartment:

(2) Provided as follows:—

(a) the various explosives of Classes 1 (gunpowder), 2 (nitrate-mixture), 3 (nitro-compound) and 4 (chlorate-mixture), safety fuzes belonging to the 1st Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class, and such of the various explosives of the 2nd Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class, as do not contain any exposed iron or steel, may be kept with each other without any intervening partition or space;

(b) the various explosives of the 1st Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class may be kept with each other without any intervening partition or space;

(c) such of the various explosives of the 2nd Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class as contain any exposed iron or steel, may be kept with each other without any intervening partition or space;

(d) the various explosives of the 3rd Division of the 6th (ammunition) Class may be kept with each other without any intervening partition or space;

(e) the various explosives of the 7th (firework) Class may be kept with each other without any intervening partition or space.

(3) Save as aforesaid, two or more descriptions of explosives shall not be kept in the same magazine.

III.—No officer will be permitted to present himself for examination by two standards of the same language simultaneously, and there shall be an interval of at least one year between the Higher Standard and High Proficiency tests and also between the Proficiency and High Proficiency tests, and an interval of at least two years between the High Proficiency and Degree of Honour tests in the same language. A candidate may compete for the higher examinations in any language without first undergoing any inferior test, but if he passes in the higher test, he will not be permitted to go up afterwards and pass the lower test. He may, however, present himself for examination in more than one language on the same day, but in this case he will be required to perform the exercises within the time allotted for one.

An officer who has passed the Degree of Honour in any language may be allowed to appear again in the same test in that language under the conditions prescribed in rule XV.

IV.—No officer will ordinarily be permitted to appear more than twice as a candidate at the same examination; but if a special recommendation be made by the examiners a candidate will be allowed to appear a third time.

V.—No officer will be permitted to earn a reward for passing an examination by the Higher Standard or the Proficiency standard after the expiration of ten years or the High Proficiency standard after the expiration of fifteen years, counted from the date of his first arrival in India, provided that in the presidencies of Madras and Bombay, where there are several vernaculars, the local Governments may, in exceptional cases, extend the time limit in the case of the Proficiency and High Proficiency examinations in the vernaculars. In the case of an examination for the Degree of Honour standard there shall be no limit of time and an officer will be permitted to earn a reward by passing this examination at any time within the period of his service.

VI.—Officers may be permitted to attend the examinations after the expiry of the periods specified in rule V, but no reward will be granted to them if they pass; and their leave must be limited to such time as may be necessary to enable them to attend the examination, and no extra expense must, under any circumstances, be caused to the State. In such cases, it will be within the competence of local Governments to refuse applications for permission to attend any particular examination, when compliance with such applications would involve inconvenience to the public service.

In the case of military officers in permanent civil or political employ, the limit of time specified in rule V within which an officer can earn a reward for the Higher Standard, the Proficiency and the High Proficiency examinations, respectively, may, for special reasons, be extended by the local Government, Resident or Agent to the Governor General under whose orders the officer is serving.

In its application to police officers the period of time specified in rule V will be reckoned in the case of officers appointed after an examination held in this country from the date of appointment in India, the date of first arrival in India holding good for officers selected in England.

In the case of an officer of the Indian Educational Service or a Chaplain the period of time will be counted from the date of his first appointment to the Educational or Ecclesiastical Departments, respectively.

VII.—Officers who are natives of India are not eligible for rewards for passing in the vernacular of the district in which they were born or educated. The local Government shall determine in each case what languages come within this definition.

VIII.—Examinations will be held quarterly on the first Monday in January, April, July and October of each year by the Board of Examiners at Calcutta.

In Madras, the examinations will be held half-yearly in January and July by the Board of Examiners, with the exception that candidates for the examinations in Arabic will be examined at present either at Calcutta or at Bombay.

In Bombay, examinations by the Proficiency, High Proficiency, and Degree of Honour standard in all languages will be held quarterly by the Civil and Military Examination Committee, simultaneously with the examination of military officers, on the first Monday in January, April, July and October. Examination by the Higher Standard will be held monthly on the first Monday. The Committee will also hold special meetings whenever directed to do so, either by His Excellency the Governor or the Lieutenant-General Commanding the Forces, Bombay, for the examination of any candidate or candidates who cannot attend during the regular monthly or quarterly sittings.

Examinations in Burmese and Pali will be held yearly in November at Rangoon by the Central Examination Committee.

When the first Monday in a month or a quarter is a gazetted holiday, the examination will be held on the following Monday or, if that is also a gazetted holiday, on the next working day thereafter.

NOTE.—The term gazetted holiday should be held to mean :—

(1) Holidays prescribed or notified under section 25 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881.

(2) Holidays on which, by Government Notification in the Gazette, any public office is ordered to be closed for the transaction of public business without reserve or qualification.

In addition to the quarterly examinations held at Calcutta, the Secretary to the Board of Examiners, Calcutta, will conduct examinations, for candidates other than officers serving in the presidencies of Madras and Bombay, twice annually at Lucknow and Lahore in March and in September or October, as necessity may arise, as follows :—

Lucknow	Urdu—Proficiency and High Proficiency. Persian—Higher Standard. Hindi—Proficiency and High Proficiency.
Lahore	Urdu—Proficiency and High Proficiency. Persian—Higher Standard and High Proficiency. Hindi—Proficiency and High Proficiency.

The exact dates of the examinations and the places at which they will be held will be notified to intending candidates on application to the Board of Examiners, Calcutta.

Officers desirous of attending examinations for which they are eligible must apply for leave to do so to the Commissioners of Divisions or Heads of the Departments in which they are serving at least three months before the date of examination. In the case of officers serving in Coorg, the application should be made to the Chief Commissioner. Officers attached immediately to the Government of India must apply to the Department of Education through the Department of the Government of India under which they are serving. The application must be accompanied by a certificate, from the Accounts Officer under whose audit control the applicant is serving, of his eligibility under rule V to appear at the examination, and should be forwarded in sufficient time to reach the Board of Examiners or the Examination Committee concerned in the case of High Proficiency and Degree of Honour at least six weeks, and in the case of other examinations at least one month, before the date of examination.

An officer who has been granted permission to appear for an examination but decides not to avail himself of it should intimate his decision to the Board of Examiners or the Examination Committee concerned at least ten days before the date of the examination.

At the close of the week there were indications of the setting in of the monsoon in the east of the Arabian Sea, and rainfall appeared on the Konkan coast.

2. Burma.—The storm in the Bay gave heavy and widespread rainfall during the last three days of the week; local rain occurred on the remaining days.

PART I (b).—RULES UNDER SECTION 60.

Rule I. Reclamation of waste land.—When land is reclaimed from waste and is brought under cultivation the increase in value derived from the improvement shall not be taken into account in revising the assessment of land revenue on the land until the expiration of a period of five years reckoned from the beginning of the harvest first reaped after such reclamation was effected.

Provided that the provisions of this rule shall not apply to grants of land held on special terms from the Government which shall be assessed in accordance with the terms of the grants, or to ordinary extensions of cultivation in the waste lands of villages.

Rule II. Improvement by irrigation.—When land assessed at unirrigated rates is improved by irrigation from a well or otherwise, the increase in value derived from the improvement shall not be taken into account in determining or revising the assessment of land revenue on the land :—

(a) If the irrigation is provided by the construction of a new well,* until the expiration of the term of the current settlement or reassessment of rates,

* New well includes a well which replaces an old one.

(b) If the irrigation is provided by the construction of a Nadi, distributary, Rāppat or by any other means, until the expiration of a period to be determined by the Collector on the merits of the improvement with reference to the actual expenditure incurred on it and the increase in value of the land created thereby, the period being sufficiently long to recoup the expenditure and to give eight per cent. interest on the capital outlay during the period of recoupment.

Rule III.—These exemptions shall be allowed only to those persons who get their improvements registered in the Collector's office within two months from the date on which the source of irrigation began to be utilised, and who obtain an extract from the register of improvements duly signed by the Collector or any other officer not below the rank of Extra Assistant Commissioner authorised by him in this behalf.

Rule IV.—The Commissioner is empowered to make at his discretion special reduction of assessment in cases where substantial sums have been spent for the renovation of existing improvements.

Rule V.—Nothing in these rules shall be understood as limiting the powers of the Chief Commissioner in any case to give to persons, who make improvements, more liberal terms than those mentioned in rules I and II or as depriving any land owner or lessee of any remission or favourable assessment to which he may be entitled under the terms of any existing agreement or unexpired settlement.

The Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner, Ajmer-Merwara's Notification No. 163—1065, dated the 20th February 1911.

PART II.—RULES UNDER SECTIONS 73 AND 110 (d).

1. A register shall be maintained by the Wasil-Baqi-Navis in each Tahsil in Form I, showing for every year the alterations in the Government demand which are sanctioned from time to time. Entries shall be made in this register as soon as sanction is received and the register will continue for the term of Settlement.

2. The account of demand, collection, and balance of the Government demand shall be kept by the Wasil-Baqi-Navis, in each Tahsil in register Form II. This register, known as the Khatauni, shall be renewed each year. An index showing the page at which each village is entered shall be prefixed to the Khatauni.

3. The demand entries shall be completed before the time for collection of the demand arrives, and those entries shall be carefully checked by the Naib Tahsildar, who will certify on the first page of the Khatauni that the entries made are correct. The Tahsildar will check at least 20 per cent. of such entries, initial them, and countersign the Naib Tahsildar's certificate. The items collected shall be regularly posted to this register. On the last working day of the month, collection entries shall be totalled and the balance struck. The final totals shall be made at the end of the year, after which the Abstracts A and B given at the bottom of the form of Khatauni shall be compiled. When the whole demand of a village is recovered, the words "paid up" shall be written in bold figures at the bottom of the page allotted to the village, in the red ink, and signed by the Tahsildar.

4. A separate page shall be given to each village, and where the entries are likely to be numerous a sufficient number of blank pages shall be inserted. The villages shall be arranged in the Khatauni, alphabetically, according to the assessment circles, under the following heads, and the number given to a village shall not be changed throughout the term of the Settlement.

(a) Fixed Khalsa villages.

(b) Variable Khalsa villages.

(c) Jagir villages.

5. When an alteration is made in the demand of any village, or when remissions or postponements are granted, a note signed by the Tahsildar, quoting the number and date of the order sanctioning the alteration, etc., shall be entered in red ink against the village concerned in the space allotted for that purpose.

6. The Wasil-Baqi-Navis shall also maintain a register in Form III to enter daily collections, a progressive total shall be given to the entries in this register. The daily total should tally with the Siaha but the Khatauni and Siaha must also be compared daily as provided hereafter.

7. The instalments of Land Revenue shall be paid on 1st January and 15th June each year.

8. No officer other than the Tahvildar (Treasurer) shall on any account receive or keep any public money whatever.

9. The revenue shall be paid at the Tahsil to the Tahsildar or such subordinate as with the sanction of the Collector he appoints to receive it. With the special permission of the Collector the [illegible] enue may be paid in direct to the Suder Treasury.

10. All money [illegible] Tahsil for payment shall be accompanied by an arz-i-irsal in duplicate in form IV. One part shall be retained in the Tahsil and the other returned to the payer as a receipt. The arz-i-irsal will first go to the Wasil-Baqi-Navis, or other departmental clerk concerned, who will verify the entries by comparison with his account of the demand and after endorsing it will return it to the payer for production with the money to the Treasurer.

11 On receipt of the arz-i-irsal endorsed by the Wasil-Baqi-Navis, the Tahvildar will receive the money, enter payment in his Siaha, and after endorsing both parts of the arz-i-irsal with his receipt, pass it on to the Siaha Navis.

12. The Siaha Navis, on the authority of the Tahvildar's receipt, will enter the money as credited in the Siaha, and after signing the first part of the arz-i-irsal will hand both parts of the arz-i-irsal over to the Wasil-Baqi-Navis, or the clerk concerned, who will then enter the amount in his Khatauni as credited and will sign both parts of the arz-i-irsal in acknowledgment of his having done so.

13. Finally the arz-i-irsal will be placed before the Tahsildar, or officer in charge of the Tahsil at the time, who will cause both parts to be stamped with the seal of the Tahsil. He will then sign the second part and make it over to the payer with his own hands, returning the first part to the Siaha-Navis, who will keep a daily file of such parts.

14. In all cases in which both Land-revenue and cesses are due, the sum paid shall first be credited to cesses and the balance, if any, to Land-revenue. Where there is more than one Lambardar in a village cesses will be credited according to the demand of the Land-revenue and cesses of the particular Lambardar who makes a payment.

15. At the end of each day and before the Siaha is closed and sent to the Head Treasury the Wasil-Baqi-Navis, or other clerk concerned and the Siaha-Navis will compare the Siaha with the Khautauni, item by item, and the Wasil-Baqi-Navis will number each item in the Khatauni in red ink with the number borne by such item in the Siaha. The Siaha-Navis and the Tahvildar will then compare the totals of their Siahas and at once bring to the notice of the Tahsildar or officer in charge of the Tahsil any discrepancy they may discover. In case a discrepancy is found the parts of the arz-i-irsal retained in the Tahsil will then be compared by the Wasil-Baqi-Navis or the departmental clerk concerned and Siaha-Navis with the Siaha.

16. To each arz-i-irsal a serial number shall be given, according to the order in which the money is credited in the Tahvildar's roznamcha or daily ledger. The series of these numbers shall commence daily, and the Tahvildar shall [illegible] each arz-i-irsal before passing it to the Siaha-Navis. The same numbering shall be shown in the daily Siaha, in the Wahsil-Baqi-Navis' Khautani and in the accounts kept up for special departments such as Takavi, Mutation fees, etc.

17. At the end of each month the Wasil-Baqi-Navis shall prepare a statement showing the demand, collection and balance of the Land-revenue of his Tahsil in Form V and submit it to the Tahsildar by the 5th of the following month without fail.

18. At the end of each year an annual mauzuwar tauzi shall be prepared by the Wasil-Baqi-Navis separately for each of the heads of demands in Form VI, and shall be submitted through the Tahsildar to the Sub-Divisional Officer. To this tauzi will be attached an abstract in Form VII explaining the increase or decrease in the demand and collections, etc., for the year.

19. Kharaj-az-siaka items are (i) moneys charged out of public accounts, and (ii) other moneys which cannot be credited to Government for want of details, or the payment of which is deferred in consequence of the parties not being present and which are therefore held in deposit.

20. The Kharij-az-siaka items will be shown in the memorandum of cash balance printed on the fourth page of the Siaha. This will give the balance in hand of such items on the previous day, the receipt and expenditure on the day in question, and the balance in hand at its close. The necessary totals will also be given.

The Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner, Ajmer-Merwara's Notification No. 714-695, dated the 26th May 1913.

21. Where there is a Sub-Treasury attached to the Tahsil, all sums in deposit will remain under double locks and where there is no Sub-Treasury the Collector's orders will be obtained as to where such items should be kept.

22. Efforts should always be made to reduce the items of deposit to a minimum.

23. The receipts and disbursements of items under deposit will be recorded in a Cash Book in Form VIII and along with the Cash Book a ledger will also be kept in a form corresponding to that of the Cash Book. Receipts, disbursements and balance of deposits will thus be shown. A third register will be kept for taking duplicate receipts for the items paid for from the deposit account. All amounts to be disbursed will be drawn on a cheque issued under the signature of the Tahsildar. This Cash Book will be kept by the Siaha-Navis under the orders of the Tahsildar. The daily balance as worked out shall be signed by the Tahsildar or other officer in charge of the Tahsil at the time.

24. On the 5th of each month the Tahsildar shall submit a statement in Form IX showing all the deposit items in the hands of the Treasurer (Tahvildar) at the end of the previous month giving reasons as to their not having been disbursed. All the kharij-az-siaha items remaining undisbursed for three complete account [illegible] be refunded or credited into the Treasury.

25. The Naib Tahsildar or, where there are two Naibs, the senior Naib Tahsildar, under the orders of the Tahsildar shall inspect the registers to be maintained by the Wahsil-Baqi-Navis, and Siaha Navis each month and submit his report through the Tahsildar to the Sub-Divisional Officer. Important matters shall be reported separately. The entries checked by him shall be initialled by the Naib-Tahsildar.

26. The inspection report shall be written in a bound book on half margin. This register will be maintained for the whole year and then filed.

27. The correct maintenance of the Tahsil accounts is a matter for which the Tahsildar is personally responsible and he must check the account books from time to time, to satisfy himself that the accounts are properly and correctly maintained, and that rules are strictly followed.

Any injury to Survey marks within the Forest areas, and the cause thereof, so far as can be ascertained, will be reported by Forest Guard in charge of the beat to the Forester of his circle who, after verifying the correctness of the statement, will immediately report the facts to the Forest Ranger or in his absence to the Extra Assistant Conservator of Forests. The Extra Assistant Conservator of Forests will submit a report on the marks in Forest areas within his jurisdiction to the Collector on the 1st March of every year and any requisite repairs will be executed through the Forest Department at the expense of the Shamlat or Government as may be decided after considering the circumstances of the case.

8. Each Patwari will, at the time of Girdawari, inspect all the marks within the limits of the village, and submit a report as to their condition.

Sentence 'He etc., to the end' and the sentence "This report to the end" should be omitted.

9. The Girdawar will submit report for his circle by the 1st March every year to the Tahsildar who, after satisfying himself of its correctness, will incorporate it in his annual report.

The rest omitted.

10. The Collector will specially notice the condition of the Survey and Boundary marks in a separate paragraph of his Annual Revenue Administration Report.

The Hon'ble the C. C., Ajmer Merwara's Resolution No. 96/562—IV, dated the 26th January 1892.

PART IV A.—RULES UNDER SECTION 110(a).

1. There shall be two classes of land variably assessed to revenue:—

(i) Areas lying in the beds of certain tanks liable to submergence and not always available for cultivation and which have been demarcated as variable mahals by the Settlement Officer, and not included in class (ii).

(ii) Whole villages which are not given a fixed assessment and which will be assessed at each harvest in accordance with these rules.

2. Lands falling within class (ii) in the preceding rule are not subject to the Irrigation Rules framed under the Irrigation Regulation, VII of 1887, except that the land irrigated from 1st class tanks shall continue to be assessed at the rates mentioned in Rule 4 of the Irrigation Rules.

3. In these rules:—

(a) "Assessable area" means an area sown with a crop which is not included in "Nabud area."

(b) "Nabud area" means an area the crop of which yields no outturn or of which the outturn is simply equivalent to the seed grain.

(c) "A fully matured crop" is a crop of which the outturn is 16 annas.

(d) The "soils" shall be classed as:—

Chahi.
Abi.
Talabi.
Barani.

according to the sources of irrigation.

Lands irrigated from different sources shall be classed according to the source most employed: where two or more sources are equally employed, the land shall be treated as belonging to the higher class.

(e) "New wells" are wells designated as such in Mr. Lupton's assessment statement and those built after 1315 Fasli (1907-1908).

(f) "New tanks and Nadis" shall be those made after 1315 Fasli (1907-1908).

(g) "Chahi land" means land irrigated from wells other than "new."

(h) "Abi land" means land lying in the beds of tanks, nadis, streams and other channels of water.

(i) "Talabi land" means land irrigated from Government or private tanks or Nadis.

(j) "Barani land" means land not falling under (g), (h) or (i).

4. Soil rates shall be fixed for each area and each village referred to in Rule I.

Areas referred to in Rule 1 (i).

5. The revenue assessable on lands of class 1 shall be found by applying the rate or rates fixed by the Settlement Officer, to the cultivated area.

6. The cultivated area for assessment under Rule (5) shall be taken from the Patwari's Khasra in each harvest Girdawari and tabulated in the Form A attached to these Rules.

Villages referred to in Rule 1 (ii).

7. The soil rates for the various villages in Rule 1 (ii) are given in the Schedule attached to these rules, and no alteration in or addition to them shall be made except with the sanction of the Chief Commissioner.

8. Fodder crops for cattle in the hot weather shall not be assessed in such villages.

9. Land under lucerne grass or metha in chahi area shall be assessed only once in the year and one bigha out of the total area of lucerne grass or metha under each well shall pay only the Barani soil rate.

10. Lands irrigated from new wells, tanks or Nadis or lying in the beds of new Nadis shall be assessed at Barani rates.

11. Abi areas in villages having Variable Agoro when irrigated shall pay Rs. 1/9 per acre in addition to the rate given in the Schedule.

12. Bhum and Muafi lands, in each harvest, if irrigated from Government tanks shall be charged water revenue only at a rate amounting to a difference between Talabi and Barani rates. Privileged holdings in the same circumstances shall continue paying Rs. 1¼ per acre per harvest.

13. The revenue assessable on villages under class (ii) shall be arrived at by applying the soil rates to the cultivated area after elimination of the Nabud area.

14. Dofasli area shall be assessed only once a year.

Exceptions:—

(1) If the area assessed at a lower rate in Kharif becomes liable to assessment at a higher rate in Rabi owing to irrigation or otherwise, it will be assessed to land revenue in the Rabi harvest at the difference of the two rates.

(2) If the area assessed as irrigated from a Government tank in Kharif is again irrigated in Rabi from the same source, it will be assessed in Rabi at the difference of the Barani and Talabi rates, provided the water be above the sluice level on February 15th otherwise at 1/3 of the above rate for each watering.

(3) Abi area in Variable Agoro if cropped in both harvests, will pay only the irrigation rate (Re. 1/9) in the Rabi harvest.

(4) The area taking sowing watering alone from a Government tank and not irrigated afterwards, will pay Re. 1/4 per acre uniformly.

Amount assessed under (2), (3) and (4) shall be treated as water revenue.

15. The assessments shall be made under the superintendence and orders of the Collector by a Revenue Officer not inferior in rank to the Tahsildar.

The Hon'ble the C. C., Ajmer Merwara's Resolution No. 436/1217, dated the 19th May 1911.

16. The Revenue Officer who is entrusted with these assessments shall invariably inspect the crops at harvest time.

17. At the several girdawaris the Patwari shall specify the nabud area particularly, writing the word nabud in red in the column of remarks of the Khasra to attract the attention of the Girdawar and other inspecting officers, and record the estimated crop outturns.

18. While checking the Patwari's girdawari in general, the Girdawar shall make it a point to inspect all the nabud areas noted by the Patwari, and he shall be held responsible for their accuracy.

19. Circle Officers, while inspecting the village, in addition to their own testing of the Patwari's work, shall at each harvest test at least 10 per cent of the entries checked by the Girdawar. They shall make a note to this effect at the end of the Khasra and enter the Khasra numbers tested and retested. Any cases of glaring discrepancy or wilful under-estimate shall be specially brought to the notice of the Collector through the Revenue Officer in charge

20. The Girdawar shall, after completion of his checking, make the Patwari prepare under his supervision a Khatauni and abstract for each village in the Form B attached to these rules, and shall submit it to the Circle Officer who shall verify its accuracy and then submit to the Tahsildar.

21. The Tahsildar or other officer specially appointed for this duty shall in his inspection at the harvest time visit each village and satisfy himself as to the accuracy or otherwise of the Girdawar and Circle Officer's testing.

22. The Tahsildar shall then apply the soil rates to the areas given in the abstract submitted by the Circle Officer :—

(a) In case of drought or other bad harvest or damage to crops by natural calamity, if he finds that the outturn over the whole of a considerable tract is below the normal (i.e., 16 annas) and that the loss is over 8 and less than 12 annas, he may obtain orders of the Revenue Officer to reduce the rates by one-half.

2. For rule 22, clause (b) substitute the following :—

(b) In case of calamities confined to definite local limits he shall submit a special report to the Collector, who shall pass orders as may be necessary. To meet this special case the Collector may be guided by the spirit of the Suspension and Remission Rules for Calamities of B. class.

23. Having thus applied the rates or modified rates as per Rule 22, he shall submit his proposals to the Revenue Officer.

24. The Revenue Officer who has already inspected the villages at harvest time shall personally check each proposal. He shall then arrive at the final assessment, and shall then submit it to the Collector for sanction in Form B. The Collector shall hold the Revenue Officer responsible for the correctness of the same.

25. The Revenue Officer shall cause the total assessment to be distributed over the cultivator's holdings. This distribution shall ordinarily be effected by applying the actual assessing rates to the assessable areas of the several holdings.

But if the Khewatdars unanimously agree to any other mode of distribution, the total demand for the harvest shall be distributed according to that method.

26. The Collector shall examine each assessment submitted under Rule 24 and satisfy himself as to its correctness, and shall correct or amend it as may seem to him to need correction or amendment. He shall be responsible for the final assessment and shall fix the final demand writing it in his own hand and signing the abstract.

27. The Collector shall then cause the assessments to be formally announced and to be collected in the usual way.

28. An English Register in Form C attached to these rules shall be maintained in the Collector's office and separate pages shall be assigned to each village. Assessments shall be posted up in this register from harvest to harvest.

29. The assessment shall be credited to heads "Land Revenue" and "Water Revenue" and "Public Works Department" in accordance with the proportion laid down in the Schedule.

30. A brief note or any remarkable event of the harvest or year affecting the revenue history of the village shall be recorded in the column of remarks of the register prescribed under Rule 28.

31. The cesses in force from time to time, at present 3/2 per cent, shall be levied on the actual demand of each harvest.

32. The Lambardar and Patel's fees at the rate of 5 % shall be calculated on the amount actually collected by them.

33. If any damage to crops occurs after assessment, special reports shall be made to the Collector who shall dispose of the matter or take necessary orders from the superior authorities.

PART IV-B. UNDER SECTION 110(a).

Rules for the reduction of Chabi Assessments in Khalsa areas when a well ceases to be of use.

1. When a well on the lands attached to which revenue has been assessed at Settlement, on account of irrigation from that well, ceases to be of use, the assessment on the lands irrigated from that well shall be reduced in accordance with these rules.

2. In the assessement volume, under each village are shown:—

(a) The total area assessed at Settlement as irrigated from each well.

(b) A lump sum in respect of each such well, which lump sum represents that portion of the total assessment on the area assessed as irrigated from the well as in excess of the ordinary dry assessment, that would be paid in the absence of the well.

Example:—Well No. 350. The Chabi assessed at Settlement as irrigated from that well was 4 acres. These 4 acres were assessed at Rs. 4-8 per acre, i.e., at Rs. 18. If the well did not exist, and those 4 acres were not otherwise irrigated, the assessment would have been 4 acres at 8 annas per acre Rs. 2; annas eight being assumed to be the ordinary dry assessment rate for the village. The portion of the assessment due to the well is then Rs. 16; and the lump sum on the well is Rs. 16, which is the amount remissable, under these rules, when the well ceases to be of use.

3. On the application of the person liable to pay assessment, the Collector shall remit the lump sum shown in the assessment volume as assessed on a well if,

(1) the Collector is satisfied that the well has become permanently unfit for irrigation; or

(2) the land assessed as "Chabi" ceases to be irrigated from the well, and is, with the permission of the Collector, irrigated from a first or second class tank and pays water rate accordingly.

4. The Collector shall decide in each case, from what harvest the reduction of revenue shall take effect.

5. When a well in respect of which remission has been given under these rules, is again brought into use (or its lands come under irrigation from a third or fourth class tank) the Collector shall reimpose the lump sum which was remitted, provided that:—

(1) in any case where e.g., when a well is repaired, the rules for the exemption of agricultural improvements from assessment would apply, due effect shall be given to those rules,

(2) if in any case the Collector comes to the opinion that there is good reason why an amount less than the whole lump sum, should be reimposed, he may reimpose such less amount only,

(3) the reimposed assessment shall become payable from the date of such order or from such later date as the Collector may fix.

6. Applications for remission with reference to Rule 3 shall be enquired into on the spot as soon as possible after being filed, by the Collector or the Subdivisional Officer, so far as possible. The Collector may authorize the Tahsildar or Naib Tahsildar to make local inspection and report the facts.

7. Patwaris should also be made responsible for the prompt report of all such wells coming into use again.

8. No appeal shall lie from any order of the Collector under these rules. But all such orders shall be subject to the control of the Commissioner.

9. The Collector shall submit a half-yearly return to the Commissioner of all well assessments remitted or reimposed by him during the half-year.

Paragraph 8 of the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner's note dated the 22nd April 1910, on the Ajmer-Merwara Settlement.

PART V. UNDER SECTION 110(c).

3. The name of the person so elected or proposed to be appointed as the case may be, as Lambardar or Patel shall be notified in the village, to raise objections, if any, to the appointment, within the space of one month.

The amount of such fine shall not exceed the pay due to him for the harvest in the course of which the fine is inflicted.

(c) To defray in the first instance village expenses, and to reimburse himself in accordance with village custom.

(d) To supervise the accounts of the village common lands, and to render accounts to the villagers of all receipts, payments and sources of income.

(e) To report to the Patwari or the Supervisor all changes in the proprietorship of muafi and bhum lands and the death of pensioners.

(f) To report to the Patwari or the Supervisor all encroachments on roads or Government land, all injuries to or appropriations of nazul buildings in the village and the destruction or removal of, or injury to, boundary or other marks, erected in the village by order of Government.

8. The chief duty of a Patel under Regulation II of 1877 shall be to collect the Government revenue and cesses for which he is responsible, and to pay the same to the Officer or Treasury appointed to receive it.

28. The Order Book (Form P. II) is a permanent register for the entry of all orders and instructions relating to rules of practice of a permanent character, which may be communicated to the Patwari. If the entry is made by the Girdawar, it shall be in the character best understood by the Patwari. The Order Book shall not consist of more than 50 pages and shall be permanently retained by the Patwari.

CHAPTER V.

Maps and Khasra Girdawari.

29. Field maps shall be corrected by the Patwaris from harvest to harvest according to the rules sanctioned by the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner, Ajmer-Merwara, in his letter No. 795—1210, dated the 9th June 1910.

30. Khasra Girdawari (Form P. III) is the record in which the existing circumstances of each field are entered on the spot each harvest. The objects of making up this Khasra are:—

(i) To obtain an accurate account of the harvest, respecting the outturn of the crop and the variety of the land;

(ii) to ascertain the changes occurring in right, rent, and possession of the land;

(iii) to ascertain the amendments necessary in the field map;

(iv) to ascertain the condition of village boundaries and survey marks.

31. The Patwari shall make every year three field to field inspections of every village in his circle. These inspections shall ordinarily commence on 1st September (for Kharif), 1st February (for Rabi) and 1st May (for Zaid Rabi). The Kharif and Rabi inspections should be completed within six weeks, and the Zaid Rabi inspection in a fortnight. The entries in the Khasra shall represent the result of local enquiry and actual inspection on the part of the Patwari.

Khasra Statements.

32. The Patwari shall prepare four statements in connection with each year's Khasra—

(1) Area statement [Milan Khasra Form P. III (a)].

(2 and 3) Crop statement [Jinswar Kharif and Rabi Form P. III (b) and (c)].

(4) List of boundary and survey marks [Form P. III (d)].

33. From the totals of the area and crop statements made out at the end of the Girdawari Register, the statements III (a), III (b) and III (c) shall be prepared by the Patwari, and submitted to the Girdawar for transmission to the Registrar Girdawar.

34. The crops to be entered separately shall be those shown in the forms of crop statements prescribed. Crops not shown separately in these statements shall be entered in the column for miscellaneous crops. Totals for the previous year shall be entered below those for the current year, in red ink, in the Milan Khasra, and any marked increase or decrease in any column shall be explained in a brief note. Changes in the total number of masonry wells shall invariably be explained in a note.

35. A register shall be kept by the Patwari in Form P. III (d) ; this register shall be made up from the entries made in column 33 of the Girdawari register Form P. III. One register will last for 5 years ; in the 6th year a new register shall be prepared, and the previous list shall be filed in the Tahsil with the Khasra Girdawari. An abstract of the list of Boundary and Survey marks shall, however, be prepared each year, and filed with the Khasra in the Tahsil.

36. When any marks are found to require repairs or renewal, an extract shall be taken from the list by the Patwari, and made over to the Girdawar for necessary action, when he visits the circle for the checking of the Girdawar each harvest.

CHAPTER VI.

Register of Mutation, Patta Qabuliat and Khewat.

37. The Patwari shall keep a register of mutations (prescribed by schedule A (3), vide the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner's Notification No. 801-562-111, dated the 16th July 1895) in Form P. IV attached to these rules.

38. He shall report in Form P. IV (a) to the Tahsildar through his Girdawar every quarter, all changes occurring in proprietary rights, or in the rights of cultivators having permanent right of tenancy in the land.

The Khewat.

39. The Khewat (Form P. V) is a register of all the proprietors of a specific area thekhadars mortgagees of proprietary rights and tenants having permanent rights of tenancy specifying the nature and extent of the interest of each. It shall be prepared each year for every village whether revenue paying or not.

40. The arrangement of Khatas shall be the same as has been followed in the Settlement Khewat. The current Khewat shall remain with the Patwari for three years. After that period it shall be made over to the Registrar Girdawar to be finally checked and filed not later than 1st October.

41. The Girdawars and Circle Officers shall examine the Khewat of each village each harvest at the time of checking the Girdawari, and satisfy themselves by personal enquiries in the village that all transfers have been included in the Khewat.

42. The Khewat after being tested shall be signed by the checking officers, and a certificate of their examination shall be given on the last page.

43. A Patwari making unauthorised changes in the Khewat shall be liable to dismissal.

CHAPTER VII.

The Dhal Banch and Shamlat accounts.

44. The Patwari shall maintain a Dhal Banch register showing the village accounts under all heads in the Form P. VIII attached to these rules. It shall be retained by him for three years from the year for which it was prepared, and shall then be filed with the Registrar Girdawar.

45. The Patwari shall explain the Shamlat accounts to the villagers annually.

46. He shall complete his accounts by the 1st October each year, and shall then fix a date for the explanation of the accounts. The date, time and place on, and at which the accounts are to be explained, shall be proclaimed by beat of drum in the village. If the majority of the Khewatdars assemble at the appointed time, the Patwari shall explain the accounts to them and get them to sign the same in token of their having passed them. If the majority of the Khewatdars fail to appear or if the Khewatdars decline to pass the accounts the Patwari shall submit a copy of the accounts to the Tahsildar, through his Girdawar with his report.

47. The Tahsildar shall publish the accounts by posting them in a conspicuous place in the village, inviting objections to them, within a fortnight from the date of publication. If no objections are preferred within the appointed period, or if such objections as are preferred are disposed of, he shall declare the accounts to have been explained to the villagers.

48. In disposing of the objections the Tahsildar shall follow the same procedure for the attendance of the witnesses, and the production of documents, etc., as is provided by the Civil Procedure Code.

CHAPTER VIII.

Jagir Patwaris.

49. In the Jagir villages, the Patwari shall prepare all those registers and records which the Patwaris in the Khalsa villages prepare, excepting that they shall not compile accounts of receipts and expenditure of the village.

50. The Jagirdar shall be responsible for supplying the Patwari with the necessary materials for preparing the records, by a date to be fixed by the Collector. The Patwari shall make out a copy of the papers and records supplied by the Jagirdar and get them signed by the Jagirdar.

51. The Patwari shall not record collections in the Jagir villages in his diary.

52. If the Jagirdar fail to deliver the requisite Jamabandi to the Patwari on the date fixed by the Collector, the Patwari shall report to the Collector, through the Girdawar, Tashildar and Sub-Divisional Officer.

53. The Collector on receipt of report mentioned in rule 52 shall issue a notice to the Jagirdar in fault, requiring him to deliver the required record to the Tahsildar within 7 days from the date of receipt of the notice, and the Jagirdar shall be bound to comply with such order.

54. The service of notice shall be done according to the provisions laid down in the Civil Procedure Code for the service of summons.

55. In villages in which expenses are recovered by contributions from the villagers distribution shall be made in the presence of the Patwari, who shall keep an account of the same, in the way in which Shamlat accounts are kept in Khalsa villages. The distribution shall be signed by the Patwari and a copy of it signed by the Panchayat of the village, shall be taken by him for record in his office.

56. Rules 49 to 55 shall apply to the minor Istimrari estates also.

CHAPTER IX.

Muafi and Bhum Holdings in Khalsa villages.

57. There are 5 classes of rent-free tenures:—

(1) Grants to charitable institutions and sacred buildings.

(2) Personal hereditary grants.

(3) Life grants.

(4) Grants during the pleasure of Government on condition of good behaviour.

(5) Grants held on condition of service (Chakarana).

58. The tenures of classes 1, 3—5 cannot be alienated, and if alienated the transfer is void.

59. It is the duty of the Patwari to report immediately to his Girdawar if the whole or a part of any rent-free holdings belonging to the classes referred to in rule 58 is transferred. He shall also report to the Girdawar if the income derived from such holdings is not appropriated to the use for which the grant was made.

60. Muafi holdings of the second class become liable to resumption, on being transferred unless the grant has been recorded as paying quit-rent, the Patwari should therefore report all transfers of the Muafi holdings of the second class also to his Girdawar as soon as such transfers are effected.

61. It is the duty of the Patwari to obtain information of the occurrence of every transfer, and failure to do so will form no excuse for not reporting it.

62. The Patwari should submit, on 1st January and 1st July each year to the Girdawar to whom he is subordinate, a report certifying that the holder or holders of Muafi holdings of the 3rd class are alive. The death of a Life-Muafidar should be reported to the Girdawar as soon as it occurs.

63. Regarding Muafi holdings of the other classes, the Patwari should on the 1st January and the 1st July of each year, furnish the Girdawar with a certificate showing that they were not alienated, that no holding was left without a holder entitled to hold it according to the Government orders, and that the income from the Muafi holdings, which were granted for a particular object, had not been misappropriated.

64. Bhum holdings cannot be transferred to any one except to the co-sharer holding under the same Sanad. Any other transfers shall be immediately reported by the Patwari. In the case of Bhum land the Patwari shall furnish his Girdawar with a certificate similar to that which is required for Muafi holdings under rule 63.

Instructions.

1. Columns 1—4.—Shall be filled up from the settlement record. (a) If a field has been sub-divided since settlement, each of its sub-divisions should be treated as a separate field, and a line of entries be given to itself. (b) If a new field has been formed by union of several fields, all of the number should be bracketed together, in the place belonging to the lowest number. All the numbers except the lowest should be entered according to their serial order also, but no entry shall be made opposite to each of them —only a reference to entry made opposite the bracket shall be given. (c) Total area of field shall be given in bighas in column 3, and the Patwari shall be responsible for its accuracy. If the area given in the settlement book is incorrect the Patwari shall enter the correct area, giving a note about it in the column of remarks, and when the Girdawar visits the circle, the entry shall be shown to him, and he shall then take orders of the superior officer in the matter. (d) When the field has been sub-divided since settlement, area of each sub-division shall be ascertained, and entered against each sub-division ; when two or more fields have been united, area of each component part shall be ascertained, and entered against the new field. (e) Entries in column 4 shall be according to the kind of soil recorded at the settement unless the Collector orders a permanent change in the kind.

2. Column 5.—The name of the principal cultivator should be written in this column with full description as to his parentage, caste and residence, etc. If the principal cultivator has sublet the land, of which he has been shown as cultivator in this column, the name of such sub-cultivator (shikmi kashtkar) should be written below the name of the former.

3. Column 6.—This is the column in which the kind of tenancy should be written, i.e., it should be stated whether the cultivator in the self-cultivating proprietor (Khudkasht), an ex-proprietary tenant, occupancy tenant or tenant at-will, etc. If the land is cultivated by the mortgagee himself write Khudkasht Mortgagee. The duration of tenancy should be counted from the commencement of the current settlement. The duration of tenancy passed before the commencement of the current settlement has already been recorded in the Jamabandi compiled during the settlement operations.

4 Column 7.—The rate and amount of rent paid for the field should be noted in this column if rent is paid in kind, it should also be noted if it is a fixed amount of produce or a share of it. 5. Columns 8—17.—(a) The crop grown shall be shown in this column with its outturn in annas of a rupee. (b) If a field bears two or more different crops grown separately in different parts of it, the name and area of each crop should be separately entered in columns 9—13 and 18—22 and measurements of each part be given in the column of remarks. (c) If two or more crops are grown mixed in the same field, they may be described as given below:—

Wheat and gram	Gulchani.
Wheat and barley	Gujji.
Gram and barley	Bejhar.

In other cases the name of that crop should be entered which predominates. Sugarcane should be classed as a Kharif crop.

5. (b) The anna outturn should be written with reference to the average outturn of each kind of land fixed by the Settlement Officer for the village concerned. For instance the Settlement Officer has fixed Makka 10 maunds an acre on Chahi land in a particular village; if in this village the outturn of Makka field 2 bighas in area irrigated from a well is 6 maunds only the Patwari should write 12 annas in column 8 and so on.

6. Columns 9—14 and 18—23.—The entries in these columns shall be made according to the actual sources of irrigation, and the actual class of soil, at the harvest under inspection—without any reference to what may have been the class of soil at any time.

7. (a) Columns 10 and 11 and 19 and 20.—Flow is an irrigation by means of sluice from a tank, and lift is irrigation from a tank by raising water with the help of some apparatus such as Denkhla, etc. (b) Land lying in the bed of a tank, nadi, nala, or a low lying land usually covered with water must be entered as Abi in columns 12 and 21.

8. Columns 15 and 24.—These columns should show the number on settlement map of well, tank or nadi, etc., which actually irrigates the field concerned. In the column of remarks, however, all tanks, nadis, wells, etc., which exist in each plot and are available for irrigation should be noted whether they irrigate or not at the time. A masonry well shall be shown by a circle in red ink, and katcha well by a circle in black ink; wells used for drinking purposes only will not be taken into consideration. If a well has been brought into use for irrigation during the year, it shall be noted as a new well in the column of remarks. If a masonry well has become useless during the year it shall be noted as a broken well. Likewise Government tanks shall be shown by a triangle in red ink, and nadis by a triangle in black ink.

9. Columns 26 and 27.—The area cropped in both the harvests is called dofasli. To find out the double cropped (dofasli) area, the settlement area of a field should be substracted from the total of the area (1) cultivated in Kharif and Rabi, and (2) left uncultivated during the year, the remainder shall be the dofasli area. If the area thus ascertained is Chahi or Talabi, it shall be written in column 26, otherwise in column 27. The Patwari should always note with the area figures in column 26 Chahi or Talabi, in column 27 Abi or Barani, and the same details should be given below the total of this column on each page as well as below the final total of the Girdawari.

10. Columns 28—30.—When land is thrown out of cultivation, entry against it in column 28 should for three successive years be "New fallow" (i.e., Jadid) "one year," "New fallow two years" and "New fallow three years." After that it should be entered in column 29 (Old fallow or Qadim). Culturrable waste (column 30) means land capable of being cultivated, but not cultivated, or reserved for a grass crop.

11. No area shall be omitted from the Khasra, every plot whether cultivated or not shall be entered. All land that has been sown shall be recorded whether cropped or not. If the crop fails, and the land is not sown in the same season, the crop entered is that which was sown and failed. If the field is resown, the latest crop sown shall be entered, whether it succeeds or fails.

12. Column 34—Each and every boundary and survey mark must be examined at the Girdawari of both harvests in the year, and the condition of the mark existing at the time should be given.

13. Entries in the Khasra must be according to the actual facts. If any entry is disputed, the Patwari should mark the number with a red cross, and leave the entry blank, reporting the case to the Girdawar who will enquire into the matter and cause the entry to be made under his signatnre. If he is unable to do so, he shall report the matter to the Tahasildar for orders.

14. Entries on each page should be totalled up from day to day. As soon as the harvest inspection is completed, the page totals should be copied at the end of the Girdawari Register and the total for the village should be made out. Details of crops grown should also be given on each page, details on each page should be copied at the end of the Girdawari, and the total for the whole village should be made out. From these two totals Milan Khasra [P—3(a)], Jinswar Kharif and Rabi [P—3(b) and (c)] should be prepared.

15. The Girdawari for the Muafi and Bhum fields should be written after the Girdawari for the Khalsa fields has been completed. Separate totals should be made out for Muafi and Bhum portion of Girdawari. The total of (1) Khalsa, and (2) Muafi and Bhum portions of the Girdawari shall be the Girdawari statistics for the whole village.

16. The forms of Girdawari shall be stitched together. Each volume shall contain 50 pages. Each page shall be numbered and stamped with the seal of Tahsil, and before these volumes are given to the Patwaris the Girdawar shall note the number of pages on each of the volumes under his signature.

Instructions.

1. This Khatauni shall be prepared Khatawar, from the Girdawar each harvest, all field belonging to one Khata shall be grouped together against that Khata. The total of Girdawari Columns (10 and 11) Kharif and (19 and 26) Rabi will tally with the totals of this Khatauni in both the harvests.

2. Only those fields will be included in this Khatauni, which are actually irrigated from the water of the tanks of the second class.

3. Khalsa Khatas will come first, then Muafi Khatas liable to assessment at privileged rates and last of all the ordinary Muafi Khatas.

4. Columns 15—17 should be very carefully written, in the Rabi harvest. These columns have no connection with columns 24 and 25.

5. Columns 9—14. Flow means irrigation with water taken out by means of sluice of the tank and lift means irrigation with tank water, by raising it by means of any apparatus such as Dhenkli, etc.

6. Column 24. Giving sowing-watering to a field is quite a different process from irrigating, a sowing-watering is the taking of water to field, before any crop is sown in it, with a view to soften it for ploughing. Irrigation means taking water to a field covered with crop. In column 24, therefore, only that area should be written to which water is given in order to soften it for ploughing whether any crop is grown over it afterwards or not. If a land which has received sowing-watering is irrigated even once from a second class tank after seed is sown in it, the area will be written in the appropriate column in the Khatauni and not in column 24.

7. It often happens that to defraud Government of the due demand, cultivators give water to the matured Kharif crop, with the intention of softening the ground for Rabi. If such case occurs, such watering should be shown in the Khatauni for Kharif, in column 24, as a sowing-watering, and if the area has also been irrigated it shall be entered in column concerned also.

8. When the Khatauni is complete in all respects it will be read out to all the water-rate payers of the village concerned, and shall be signed by them and the Patwari.

9. The Khatauni shall then be sent to the Tahsildar through Girdawar for assessment.

10. When it is returned duly assessed, the Patwari shall distribute the amount of assessment on the Khatas and enter the amount due against each Khata in columns 6, 8, 22, 25 and 27 and the total of all the said columns in column 28. The amount shown in column 28 shall be posted to the Dhal Banch in column 9 in Kharif and in column 37 in Rabi.

11. In the Khatauni for Rabi the Patwari shall note in the column of remarks the date on which water falls below the sluice level, giving a reference to the No. of report, against which such date was recorded in his diary.

CHAPTER II.

Maintenance of Village Maps.

21. The duties and responsibilities of the Supervisors in respect of the maintenance of Village Maps are described in the Map Correction Rules sanctioned by the Honourable the Chief Commissioner, in his letter No. 795—1210, dated the 9th June 1910, rule 15. Rules given hereafter comprise additional instructions for the Supervisors on this subject.

22. The Supervisor is responsible for seeing that all the chains in use in his circle are of proper length, and small compare them with a steel measuring tape. Any error detected must at once be rectified in his presence.

23. He shall once in every three months see that the survey instruments in charge of the Patwaris in his circle are in good condition and furnish the Tahsildar with a certificate to this effect. In case any instrument is missing or out of repair, he shall submit a detailed report to the Tahsildar.

24. He shall prepare a record of all the check lines run by him under Rule 15 (C) of the rules referred to in rule 21 above and submit it to his circle officer, who will check as much of it as he thinks necessary and report on the accuracy or otherwise of the work done by the Supervisor through the Tahsildar to the Sub-Divisional Officer.

25. By the 1st June each year every Supervisor shall submit to the Tahsildar through his circle officer a brief report on the corrections made in the village Maps of his circle.

26. The Supervisor shall be supplied with a brass scale in use in the District and a pair of compasses at the cost of the Government.

CHAPTER III.

Annual testing of the Patwari's papers.

Testing Khasra Girdawari.

27. The Supervisor will commence his regular annual village to village visitations for the purpose of testing Khasra entries on the dates prescribed for the commencement of field inspection by the Patwari (Rule 31 Patwari Rules)each harvest. From this date till the completion of the Girdawari for each harvest he must be constantly in the field, moving from circle to circle, to ensure that each Patwari is progressing with his map correction and Khasra preparation properly. Cases of idleness or ill-health likely to delay the work seriously should be reported to the Tahsildar.

28. The Khasra entries of each village in a circle must be carefully tested by the Supervisor by actual test and inspection, and by enquiries made on the ground. This testing may be partly effected while the Khasra writing is in progress, and need not be altogether postponed until it is complete. Each field number tested must be initialled by him and all entries found incorrect and corrected by him should be marked with a red cross.

29. Not less than 7 per cent. of the Khasra entries should be tested by the Supervisor each harvest. 7 per cent. of the uncultivated fields should also be inspected by him. Some of the fields tested in one harvest should be re-tested in the other harvest also, and the entries regarding the doubly cropped (dofasli) fields should be verified.

30. When a number is tested, all the entries in the line of that number must be tested. The Supervisor must compare a certain number of entries with the previous year's Khasra and Khewat, to ascertain that the changes have been correctly recorded.

31. Every number in a village should be tested at least once in six years. To ensure this the Supervisor should keep a register of fields in the village in the following form for each harvest :—

Name of Mauza.

No. of Khasra.	Years in which tested.					No. of Khasra.	Years in which tested.
1	2					1	2

This register should be written up immediately after the Khasra testing is completed. If he is transferred before all the numbers in each village in his circle are tested he shall make over the testing register or registers to his successor, who shall carry on the testing work from the point where his predecessor leaves it.

Boundary and Survey marks Register Form P-3 D.

32. Along with Khasra testing the Supervisor shall examine the boundary and survey marks also, and he shall complete the examination of all the marks in each village comprised in his circle at least once in two years. He shall initial entries against each mark examined by him in the Patwaris' Register P-3 D, and note the date or dates on which such marks are examined. If he finds any mark or marks out of repair, he should report at once to the Tahsildar.

Testing crop statements P-3 A, P-3 B and P-3 C (Patwari Rules).

33. The Supervisor shall be personally responsible for the accuracy of Milan Khasra (P.-3 a), Jinswar statements for Rabi and Kharif (P-3 b) and (P-3 c), prepared by the Patwaris of his circle, and will be answerable for any delay in their submission. He must before submission compare them with the totals of the Khasras which have already been checked by him.

Mutation Register P. 4.

34. The chief duty of the Supervisor is to see that all the changes occurring amongst the proprietors or amongst the tenants having permanent rights of cultivation in the land in their occupation are regularly and punctually reported by the Patwaris. He should therefore make careful enquiries respecting such changes in the villages in his charge from time to time. The best way of holding such enquiries is to assemble Lambardars, Patels, and leading persons of the village concerned periodically, read out the last year's Khewat to them, and note the changes pointed out as having occurred. These notes should be compared with the Patwari's register of Mutations. This procedure will show at once what changes are not reported by the Patwari. If the Supervisor finds that the omission to report such changes was due to the Patwari's culpable negligence, he should report him to the Tahsildar for punishment.

35. The Supervisor is responsible for seeing that the entries in columns 1 to 10 of the Mutation Report Form P-4 A, are properly filled in, and should sign the entry in column 10.

36. It is not necessary for him to summon the parties and record their statements; that is the business of the circle officer. Supervisors are required to verify the accuracy of entries in columns 1 to 10 and to ensure that the entries in these columns are correctly made in accordance with the instructions issued for that purpose.

Annual record of Proprietors' Khewat.

37. The Khewat will be prepared in the Tahsil, and it will be the duty of the Supervisor to see that the Patwaris incorporate all changes that have been ordered in the Annual Khewat, according to rules.

38. The Supervisor should check at least 25 per cent. of the entries himself. At the end of the Khewat he should give a certificate in the following form :—

"Certified that I checked the Khewat for the year 13 Fasli and found it correct."

39. He should give the details of the rented area also at the end of each year's Khewat.

Register of Improvements. Form P. 7.

40. The Supervisor will attest carefully, by personal local enquiries, and if necessary by local inspection and examination of the settlement records, all the entries in regard to improvements, which are made in the register of improvements, by the Patwari, and note remarks about such alterations in the column of remarks from time to time, and affix his signature to such remarks.

41. An extract in the following form shall be made from the Patwari's register of Improvements and submitted to the Sub-Divisional Officer at once through the Tahsildar.

Name of village and Khasra No. of land.	Description of Improvement.	Cost.		Land benefited and date from which benefit commenced.	Name and right in the land benefited, of the person who made the improvement.
		Taccavi.	Otherwise.
1	2	3	4	5	6

Account Registers Forms P-8, P-9, and P-10.

42. The Supervisor must check the Dhal Banch each harvest before the list for collections is given to headmen. He should see that the entries in the Dhal Banch are correct and that postings of items from list of assessment Khataunis and such other registers from which items are generally posted to the Dhal Banch register (P.-8), have been correctly made. He should also check the totals of Dhal Banch, and sign it as well as the list to be given to the Lambardars for collection.

43. He shall be held personally responsible for any delay which occurs in handing the list for collections over to the Lambardars and Patels concerned.

44. The Registers and Khataunis, Forms P-12, P-13, P-14, P-15 and P-16, should be carefully compared with the Girdawari registers before the Khataunis for variable assessment of land and water revenue are submitted by the Supervisor to the Tahsildar.

CHAPTER IV.

Compilation and submission of returns and statistics.

45. The Supervisor will compile the return from the returns received from the Patwaris in his charge, and submit it to the Tahsildar. A copy of the return which he submits should be kept in his office.

46. He will make a separate file for each return he has to submit, and all returns submitted up to the end of the term of settlement will be placed on such file or files.

47. All such files shall be entered in a register called mislband, and when a Supervisor leaves his circle, he will make over all the files and the mislband register to his successor and take his receipt.

2. By far the most important part of the experiment is the selection of the field to be cut, which should be representative of as large an area as possible, and should not be in appearance either above or below the average for the season on its class of land. The value of each experiment depends on the extent to which its results are typical, and care should be taken to ensure that each crop cut is of about the average for its class. If for instance a barley field of chahi land is selected, its crop should be fairly representative of the season's barley crop on chahi land. In cases where a whole field conveniently situated cannot be found bearing a representative crop, it will generally be possible to select a portion of a field as typical of the season.

3. Experiments are not ordinarily to be made by officers of a lower rank than the Extra Assistant Commissioner. When it is proposed to employ an officer of lower rank, the previous sanction of the Commissioner must be obtained. The Patwari and Girdawar of the circle must invariably be present during the conduct of a crop experiment, to supply all necessary information regarding land classification, rent, etc., and furnish any survey appliances which may be required.

4. Except in the case of cotton, the area cut should be invariably one-tenth of an acre that is to say a square chain which can be easily laid out on the ground with a chain and cross-staff. In the case of a cotton crop the area selected for the first picking must be such as can be easily identified at the time of the subsequent pickings, and should be carefully marked on the ground when the area experimented with is not marked off as one-tenth of an acre. It should of course be measured at the time of experiment and its area (in acres) be calculated.

5. It is essential that the whole of the harvesting operations be conducted in the presence of the officer experimenting, and the crop must not, therefore, be cut till completely ripe, when it can be threshed out by manual labor without much difficulty.

6. In the case of cotton the instruction of the preceding paragraph may be relaxed, and if the first picking has been conducted in the presence of the officer initiating the experiment, subsequent pickings may be carried out in the presence of another officer, whose grade should, however, not be below that of Girdawar.

7. The out-turn or yield given should be in all cases that of the main product of the crop (e.g., grain, whether husked or unhusked, as distinct from straw, and cleaned cotton as distinct from cotton seeds). If any estimate can be made of the out-turn of bye-products (e.g., straw and fodder), their weight should be entered in the return below the estimate of the main product, but if the weighment of the bye-products occasions much trouble they can be disregarded.

8. The out-turn must invariably be returned by weight as calculated by the use of steel-yards supplied by the Commissioner.

9. The out-turn must be reduced to its ordinary marketable form before weighment. An accurate description of the actual product which was weighed should be given in every instance.

10. The cultivator whose crop is cut should not be allowed to suffer any loss by the experiment, and the whole of the produce should be made over to him. It may on occasion be well to make him a small present by way of compensation for any trouble which the cutting may have occasioned him or by way of acknowledgment of any assistance he may have rendered.

11. The results of the experiment should be reported to the Commissioner by the 1st of June of each year in the form appended.

12. The cost of conducting these experiments should be trifling. Funds to meet it can, if necessary, be allotted by the Commissioner.

PART VII.

RULES UNDER SECTION NO. M (S-46) (c) OF THE SCHEDULE MADE APPLICABLE TO AJMER-MERWARA NO. 801—562—111, DATED 16TH JULY 1895.

Rules for the correct maintenance of the village Maps and Khasras.

1. Each Patwari is supplied with :—

(a) A copy of the settlement map on tracing cloth,

(b) A copy of the settlement map on long cloth, for each village in his circle.

2. The copy on tracing cloth shall be kept by the Patwari with his Settlement Volume for permanent record purposes, and on this copy the Patwari shall not record any changes.

3. The copy on long cloth is supplied for working purposes, for use at the Girdawari, and on it the Patwari shall record at each Girdawari the actual changes occurring on the ground.

Such changes shall be recorded on the map itself and not as heretofore on separate slips. This system of separate slips (Titimma-Shajrajat) is hereby abolished.

4. This copy on long cloth for recording changes shall be in use year after year until it becomes unserviceable. When it has become unserviceable the Patwari shall under the orders of the Girdawar prepare a fresh working map in the following manner :—

(a) He shall first compare the working map (on long cloth) with his record copy (on tracing cloth), and note where the former shows changes from the latter, and he shall then prepare a list of all the plots that have so changed.

(b) He shall next put the record copy (on tracing cloth) of the map on to the tracing frame and shall then stretch over it the new cloth on which the fresh map is to be traced.

(c) Before starting to trace the map he shall first with the guide of the list prepared under instruction (a) above mark the position of all the changed plots on the new cloth with pencil crosses.

(d) Having thus indicated the position of those changed plots he shall trace in first the boundaries of the village and then all the plots that have remained unchanged leaving blank spaces where pencilled cross marks made as above (c) are shewn.

(e) He shall then remove the Record copy (on tracing cloth) from the frame and in its place put the old working copy of the map on to the frame; over which he shall then stretch the new but still incomplete trace, fitting them carefully together so that the blank spaces left on the new cloth trace coincide with the portions of the old map where the red lines thereon indicate changes. He shall then in these blank spaces trace in from these red lines of the old map the new boundaries as they now exist, omitting the lines or boundaries that have changed.

(f) In numbering the new trace he shall take the numbers of the plots that have remained unchanged from the record copy (tracing cloth) of the map and of those on list (a) above from the old working copy.

(g) The old working copy (long cloth) of the map shall be retained by the Patwari for future reference.

Correction of Map.

5. During each Girdawari the Patwari shall compare the fields one by one with his map and shall note thereon all changes of field boundaries and other alterations. Changes shall be made in red ink on the map. Changes may be shown first while the Patwari is actually doing his Girdawari in the field in pencil, but these pencilled marks shall be afterwards inked up in red.

6. The correction of the map shall be completed and alterations all be inked in by May 31st.

The following are the possible changes that will have to be dealt with :—

7. When a field is found to have been divided into two or more portions, the Patwari shall give a separate number to each portion, writing the original number as numerator and the fractional number as denominator.

Division of fields.

Example :—Field No. 33 stood in the Settlement Jamabandi as in the property of Jawana, and in the cultivation of Bhura, Jodha and Banna, sons of Rama, with an area of 2 Bighas 2 Biswas. At the Girdawari the Patwari finds that the three brothers have divided the field equally among themselves. He should add two lines to the field in his map and give three lines in the Khasra to these fields, giving them the numbers $\frac{33}{1}$, $\frac{33}{2}$, $\frac{33}{3}$.

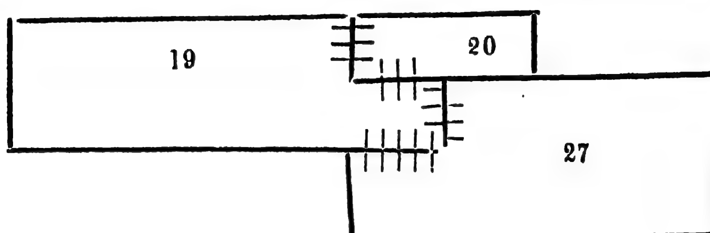
	~~33~~
$\frac{33}{1}$	$\frac{33}{2}$	$\frac{33}{3}$

The Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner, Ajmer-Merwara's letter No. 795—1210, dated the 9th June 1910.

He should ascertain, by survey, if necessary, the area of each portion and enter it in the proper column : e.g.

$\frac{38}{1}$—14 Biswas—Jawana, Khewat. Khata No. 3. } Bhura s/o. Raman, 8 years @—etc. ½ Banta.

$\frac{38}{2}$—14 Biswas—As above. Jodah s/o. Raman, 8 years @—etc. ½ Banta.



$\frac{38}{3}$—14 Biswas—As above. Banna s/o. Raman, 8 years @—etc. ½ Banta.

Union of fields.

8. When the Patwari finds that two or more plots, formerly separate, have been joined together as one, or that a former boundary has disappeared, he shall proceed as in the following examples:—

EXAMPLE (A) :—

Field Nos. 19, 20, and 27 standing in the same property have been united.

The former record of these fields was :—

19.—1 Big. 3 Bis.—Zora Khewat. Khata No. 13. } Bhiyan s/o. Toda, 13 years 2/8 Bilmukta.

20.—11 Biswas— Do. Bhiyan s/o. Toda, 13 years -/12 Bilmukta.

* * * * * * *

* * * * * * *

27.—3 Bighas—Zora Khewat. Khata No. 13. } Bhiyan s/o. Toda, 13 years 4/- Bilmukta.

The Patwari shall score out the intermediate boundaries on the map as shown above and make all the entries opposite No. 19 showing the area of each component part and the total in the column of area :—e.g.,

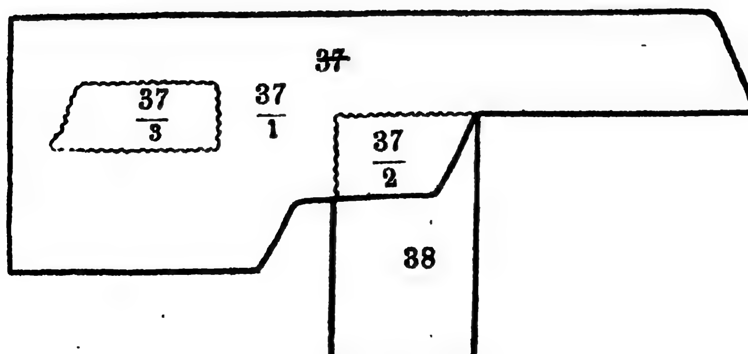
19.—1 Bigha 3 Biswas
20.—0 „ 11 „
27.—3 „ 0 „ } Zora Khewat Khata No. 13. Bhiyan s/o. Toda, 13 years @ 7/4 Bilmukta.

4 „ 14 „

(In column of remarks "includes Nos. 20 and 27.")

20..........................Column of remarks "included in No. 19."

* * * * * * * *



27.......................... Do. do. "included in No. 19."

(B) If, in the above instance, only field Nos. 19 and 20 stood in the same property and No. 27 in the different one, then the Patwari shall keep intact the line of boundary between field Nos. 19 and 27 and make a separate entry for No. 27 as before.

Nautor.

9. In respect of Nautor, the Patwari shall proceed as follows :—

Example :—A large plot of culturable land stood as No. 37 in the property of the Shamlat Deh, area 13 Bighas.

The Patwari now finds that a piece of No. 37 has been included into field No. 38.

(a) Now, if field No. 38 is also the property of the Shamlat Deh, the entry against No. 38 shall be as under :—

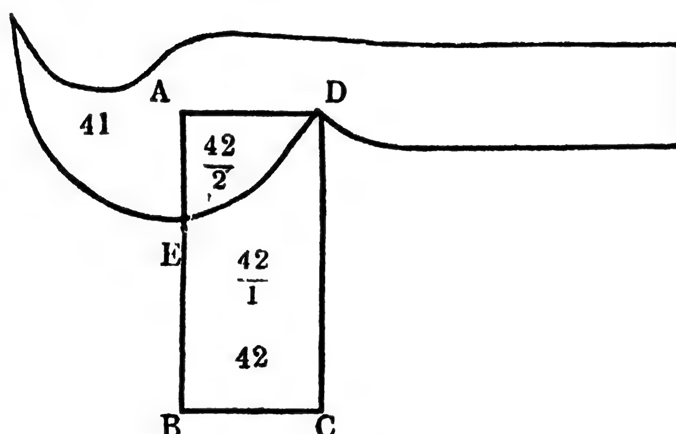
$\frac{37}{2}$		8 Bis.	Shamlat Deh —Deva s/o. Chimna, 9 years @ ½ Banta and one year, Bila-tasfia.
38	1 Big.	13 Bis.
	2 Big.	1 Bis.

(b) In case No. 38 is not in the same property the entry to be made shall be :—

$\frac{37}{2}$—8 Bis.—Shamlat Deh—Deva s/o. Chimna one year, Bila-tasfia.

(c) A piece of land is reclaimed out of No. 37. The Patwari shall find out its position on the map by survey, make the shape on the map and find out its area. The entry to be made shall then be :—

$\frac{37}{1}$—11 Big. 12 Bis.—Shamlat Dey.—Banjar Jadid.



$\frac{37}{2}$— 8 Biswas — Do. —Deva s/o. Chimna, one year, Bila-tasfia.

$\frac{37}{3}$— 1 Bigha — Do. —Moda s/o. Jodha, one year, @ ½ Banta.

Apparent wrong survey at Settlement or after.

10. If in respect of any field or chak, the previous survey appears to be incorrect the Patwari shall proceed as in the following example :—

On the slope of a hill stood Meda's field No. 42. At the survey, owing to want of the distinguishing lines of boundary or for some other reason, a portion of the hill area, out of No. 41, was surveyed and included in Meda's field :—e.g., as under :—

According to the survey, Meda's field No. 42, is the rectangle A B C D. The Patwari finds that in the present harvest Meda has cultivated his own area E B C D only and left out the hill area A E D. The Patwari shall make on the map the line E D and find out the area of A E D and give it the number $\frac{42}{2}$ denoting Meda's field by the number $\frac{42}{1}$.

(a) Now, if the parties are agreed, the Patwari shall make the following entries :—

$\frac{42}{1}$—1 Big. 16 Bis.—Meda Khewat.—Khud-kasht.
Khata No. 4.

$\frac{42}{2}$—4 Biswas. —Shamlat Deh—Pahar.

This entry shall be made in red ink in the Khasra so that it may attract the attention of the Girdawar and other Inspecting Officers.

(b) In case the parties dispute, the Patwari shall make the following entry in red, adding the word "Tanaza" in the column of remarks, and direct the contending parties to apply to a Revenue Officer for orders.

$\frac{42}{1}$—1 Big. 16 Bis.—Meda Khewat.—Khudkasht.
Khata No. 4.

$\frac{42}{2}$—4 Biswas. — Do. —Pahar and in column of remarks "Tanaza." When the matter has been gone into by a Revenue Officer, the orders passed shall be duly given effect to in the Patwari's current papers.

11. In the case dealt with in the following example, the Patwari shall proceed as directed below :—

Other ordinary Harvest changes.

EXAMPLE :—

A field No. 24 stood in the cultivating possession of Tota. At the Kharif Girdawari the Patwari finds that Tota has sown Makka in the portion A B C D and has allowed the portion E F B A to lie fallow.

The Patwari shall not at once amend the map, but shall simply make a detail in the column of crop as :—

Makka.—1 Bigha, and in the column of remarks.—2 Bighas.—" Saunoba."

If at the Rabi Girdawari he finds that the entire field E F C D has been sown, no change on the map is needed. But if he finds that only the portion E F B A has been sown, he shall at once draw the line A B on the map in dotted red line and number the fields separately as $\frac{24}{1}$ and $\frac{24}{2}$.

12. In the case of changes caused by natural occurrences, the Patwari shall proceed as in the following example :—e.g. :—

Natural Occurrences.

Field No. 25 stood at the slope of a hill No. 28.

The Patwari finds that through excessive rush of water a ravine has been cut into the field as shown above. Now, if the ravine is so shallow that the cultivator will be able to level it out with his plough or kassi the map need not be altered. But if it is rather deep and has to all appearance become quite separate from the rest of the field, the Patwari shall amend the map in the manner shown in the sketch above, give three separate numbers to the different portions and enter their respective areas after calculation, Plot No. $\frac{25}{2}$ being shown as "Nala" if uncultivated.

Exceptions.

13. In the case of Halsara lands, if the field boundaries are not permanent but the plots culivated change from year to year, or in lands in the bed of a stream like the Sarsuti or Sagarmati, the actual boundaries of the plots cultivated in the harvest under Girdawari shall be shown in pencil only and shall not be inked in, the pencilled marks of the previous harvest, if the actual areas then cultivated have since been given up, being rubbed out from the map.

Halsara lands and shifting cultivation.

General.

14. The working copy (on long cloth) of the map and the Khasra are intended to be a current index of the actuals facts on the ground as they change from harvest to harvest or year to year The facts as they existed at the time of the Settlement Khanapuri are already on record in the Settlement copy (on tracing cloth) of the map and in the Settlement volume, which can always be referred to when necessary. These Settlement entries are, of course, not to be reproduced blindly in subsequent years, irrespective of changes that have occurred since. The Patwari is responsible for the accuracy of all current entries in the current map and Khasra and shall satisfy himself of the actual facts by enquiry from the persons concerned as well as by personal inspection of the facts on the ground.

15. Girdawars are reminded that under Rule 38, clauses (c) (j) (k) and (l) of the Rules made by the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner under section 110 (d) of the Ajmer Land and Revenue Regulation, 1877, each Girdawar is personally responsible for the correct and up to date maintenance of the village maps for all villages in his circle. He shall therefore :—

(a) See that these present rules and instructions are carefully carried out by the Patwaris.

(b) Check as many as possible of these changes observed on the map and

(c) In cases where a whole chak is changed, run a check line with the chain, and quarter staff or optical square, diagonally through the chak in order to test the accuracy of the Patwari's work.

(d) Report for orders any Patwari who is found to be neglecting this work of harvest to harvest map correction.

(e) In token of his having observed the above directions the Girdawar shall sign the Khasra entries relating to all the changes which he has checked.

16. All Inspecting Officers when checking the Patwari's and Girdawar's work shall devote special attention to this work of map correction and satisfy themselves that the Patwaris and Girdawars are properly discharging their respective duties in this matter.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Rainfall summary for the seven days ending at 8 hrs. on Thursday, the 11th June 1914, based on the Indian Daily Weather Reports of the period.

1. The monsoon appeared on the west coast of the Peninsula on the 4th and extended northwards along the coast as far as Gujarat. It also gave some rain in upper Sind, Rajputana, Central India, the west of the Central Provinces, the Bombay Deccan and Hyderabad. The Bay monsoon current occasioned widespread rain in Burma, but has not yet been established in northeast India, where the rainfall was associated chiefly with thunderstorms.

Disturbed conditions in the extreme north caused some rain in Kashmir, the North-West Frontier Province, the Punjab and the United Provinces: they contributed also to the rain in Rajputana.

2. Burma.—Rainfall was nearly general in Lower Burma on every day of the week, except the 5th, and in Upper Burma on the 4th and 9th.

Northeast India, including Orissa.—There was some rain in all parts of northeast India, but nearly general rain occurred only on the 5th in Assam and on the 4th in Bengal.

The United Provinces, Central India and the Central Provinces.—Nearly general rain fell on the 4th in the west of the United Provinces, and on the 6th in Central India West. Local falls occurred in other parts of the division.

Northwest India.—Rainfall was general in west Rajputana on the 7th and 10th, and local falls were reported during the week from all other parts of northwest India, except west Baluchistan and lower Sind.

The Peninsula.—There was nearly general rain on the west coast south of Bombay on the 4th, 5th, 8th and 10th, in Malabar on the 6th and 9th, in Mysore on the 6th, in north Hyderabad on the 8th and 9th, and in the Madras Deccan on the 10th. Local falls occurred elsewhere.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

MEMORANDUM ON THE METEOROLOGICAL CONDITIONS PREVAILING BEFORE THE ADVANCE OF THE SOUTH-WEST MONSOON OF 1914.

Monsoon rainfall in India is affected by previous conditions over various parts of the earth. The recent data of those which appear to be of importance are :—

THE ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

2. At Buenos Aires monthly pressure was in excess by ·031″ in March, but was in defect by ·028″ in April and by ·024″ in May.

CHILI.

3. At Santiago monthly pressure was in excess by ·012″ in March and by ·035″ in April ; in May it was in defect by ·004″.

THE PACIFIC OCEAN.

4. At Honolulu pressure during May was in defect by ·014″.

AUSTRALIA.

5. Pressure was in defect in April by ·04″ and in excess in May by ·03″.

THE INDIAN OCEAN.

6. (a) Mauritius.—Except during the third week barometric pressure was below the normal throughout May. The defect amounted to ·08″ during the last week and to ·02″ for the whole month. Winds were slightly weaker and more southerly than usual.

(b) Zanzibar.—Pressure was normal in April and about ·025″ in excess in May ; for the last two weeks it has been in slight defect. Winds in May were on the whole strong and steady, and blew more directly from the west than usual : in the first week of June, however, variable winds set in. Rainfall was in defect by 8 per cent in April and 66 per cent in May.

(c) Seychelles.—In May pressure was high by about ·015″. Winds were remarkably light and unsteady, and the amount of rainfall was in slight excess of the normal. In the first week of June heavy rainfall occurred.

(d) Logs of vessels.—Over the west of the equatorial belt for which alone information is forthcoming, the northward extension of the south-east trades was materially retarded, and apparently it was owing to this that no temporary advances of monsoon winds were recorded over the east of the Arabian Sea during May.

Over the Bay of Bengal the weather was considerably more disturbed than usual.

AFRICA.

7. British Central Africa.—Rainfall was excessive in April.

German East Africa.—Rainfall in May was very deficient.

North-east Africa.—The floods of the Nile are mainly due to rainfall in Abyssinia, and in April and May this is brought by monsoon winds from the Indian Ocean. After some early rises in April the levels in the gauges were below normal and the real rise of the Blue Nile did not occur until the fourth week of May. Pressure has been above normal.

SNOWFALL.

8. (a) No information is available regarding the snowfall in Central Asia.

(b) In north-east Persia as represented by Meshed the snowfall, although it continued rather late, was on the whole not so heavy as usual.

(c) In Baluchistan the precipitation was heavier than usual in November, February and April, below the average in December and March, and nearly normal in May.

(d) In Kabul the precipitation was apparently well above the normal in February and April, and in defect in November, December, January and March.

(e) The snowfall in the mountains of the North-West Frontier Province was probably either normal or in defect except in February when it was markedly in excess.

(f) In Kashmir the precipitation was on the whole distinctly in excess in November and February, and below the normal during the rest of the winter, but particularly from March to May. By the beginning of June the snowline on the mountains surrounding Leh had retreated to an altitude of about 15,000 feet, and most of the passes had opened for traffic.

(g) In the Punjab Himalayas the winter began early in November and did not terminate until about the middle of May. The snowfall was greater than usual in November, December, February, May and perhaps also in April, and in defect in January and March. In February snow fell to unprecedentedly low levels in some parts of the Rawalpindi district.

On May 11th snow is reported to have fallen down to a level of about 7,000 feet in the interior of the Simla hills, to about 8,000 feet in the Kulu hills and to 9,000 feet in Chamba. On the snowy ranges seen to the north-east of Simla the accumulations appear to be somewhat greater than at the corresponding dates in 1913 and 1912, but they are clearly less than in 1911.

(h) In the Kumaon hills there was an excess in November and February, but in the rest of the period the fall was either about normal or in defect.

(i) In the eastern Himalayas, according to the scanty information available, the snowfall of the winter season was either up to the average or in very slight excess. Heavy snow is said to have fallen in the second part of April on the Jalap La Pass.

On the whole it may be said that the snowfall was unusually prolonged and heavy in the Punjab Himalayas, but that over the rest of the mountain zone bordering upper India the winter, although protracted beyond its normal date, was not severe.

(j) With regard to the accumulation of snow at the present time very little direct information is available.

The general impression left is that the accumulation is probably in slight defect in the North-West Frontier Province and Kashmir, roughly normal in Baluchistan, Afghanistan and the United Provinces, in slight excess in north-east India, and in very large excess in the Punjab.

INDIA.

9. Weather in May was very abnormal. Disturbances of the winter type were much more in evidence than usual, and in northern India the weather was more or less unsettled throughout the month with the exception of the fourth week, while for a short period, from the 7th to the 10th, there was remarkably widespread rainfall over the tract lying between the North-West Frontier Province and Assam. In the Peninsula, although thunderstorms were of occasional occurrence, there was on the Malabar coast an entire absence of the preliminary irruptions of monsoon winds and weather which are the customary forerunners of the permanent advance of the monsoon.

Pressure during May, averaged over the plains of India, was ·032" higher than the average.

In north-west India the temperature conditions were more unsteady than usual, but probably not to a greater extent than is explained by the passage of the disturbance already referred to

The monsoon arrived on Malabar and south Konkan coasts on the 4th June which is about the usual date.

Inferences from the data.

10 (a) The records of the past show that the pressure distribution outside India most favourable to rainfall in India as a whole is that in which pressure is high in March, April and May in Argentina and Chili, and low in May in the Indian Ocean. In the present year conditions were favourable in March, and neutral in April; but in May they were distinctly unfavourable in South America, slightly unfavourable at Zanzibar and Seychelles and in Australia, and slightly favourable at Mauritius. Pressure was unsteady at Mauritius in May and this is usually associated with an unsteady monsoon. On the whole the pressure conditions outside India appear slightly unfavourable.

(b) A statistical examination of the effect of the high pressure in India in May shows that it is distinctly advantageous for Malabar and less so for Mysore, but somewhat unfavourable for Bihar and the United Provinces. The high pressure of India last May was very pronounced.

(c) The effect of an excess of snowfall accumulation upon the monsoon rainfall of India as a whole is to diminish it in the early portion of the season; no influence is exerted on the rainfall of August or September. A statistical examination shows that the effect of an excessive accumulation over the whole mountain zone bordering upper India is shown chiefly in the United Provinces, the east and north Punjab, Kashmir, the North-West Frontier Province, Rajputana, and Central India. At the present time the accumulation as a whole may be classed as only in slight excess, while that in the Punjab Himalayas appears to be in very large excess; hence the prejudicial influence is not likely to be exerted appreciably outside the Punjab and the United Provinces.

(d) The conditions in the Indian Ocean are rather complex. There is a tendency for a large accumulation of snow to be associated with heavy rain and variable winds in the equatorial region, and these features appeared at Seychelles in May but not at Zanzibar. Since Zanzibar is in the track of the Arabian Sea monsoon while Seychelles is on the eastern margin of the track of the Bay current, the fact that conditions at Seychelles alone were unfavourable seemed at variance with the activity of the monsoon in the Bay and its weakness in the Arabian Sea in May;* the natural inference was that the area of variable winds extended from Seychelles almost to Zanzibar, and this is confirmed by the appearance this week of variable winds at Zanzibar with a weakening of the Arabian Sea monsoon current. The extent of the area affected by variable winds cannot be determined with any accuracy from two stations only, and the effect in the present case is hard to estimate. But it would appear likely that the Arabian Sea monsoon will be slow in establishing itself in the interior of the country.

SUMMARY.

11. (a) The indications are conflicting, but it appears on the whole likely that the total monsoon rainfall of India will be somewhat less abundant than usual, at any rate in the earlier part of the season.

* With this may be associated the deficiency in May of rainfall in Abyssinia; the air current to provide this flows in the equatorial region side by side with that which becomes the monsoon current of the Arabian Sea.

(b) There are indications of unsteadiness, so that periods of abundant as well as of scanty rainfall are to be expected.

(c) Regarding the geographical distribution of rainfall it seems that while local conditions are favourable for the Malabar coast they are somewhat unfavourable for the Punjab and United Provinces, and, to a very slight extent, for Rajputana and Central India. These indications regarding distribution apply only to the first half of the monsoon period.

Distress is increasing in the famine area and in parts of the scarcity tracts. The numbers on relief have fallen during the week. The public health is generally good. Crime shows an increase in four districts; elsewhere it is normal. Little wandering or emaciation is noticed. Emigration and immigration continue on a small scale. Cattle are reported to be deteriorating rapidly in the famine area and disease and mortality among them are increasing. Clothing is being distributed to the poor and needy and cash doles from charitable funds are being given to indigent and respectable people and to parda nashin women. Fodder and water are deficient in the famine area and in parts of the scarcity tracts. Markets are well stocked except in Etawah where stocks are low. The price basis is from 9 to 13 seers per rupee.

Punjab.—Light rain was nearly general. Harvesting of spring crops has nearly been completed and the yield is normal to good. Sowings of cotton, fodder and other autumn crops continue and are normal except in parts of the southeast where they are restricted. The condition of standing crops is generally good. Reaping of extra spring crops has commenced in some districts. The water-supply is on the whole sufficient but shortage of canal water is reported in parts of the southeast and of drinking water in a few submontane districts. Cattle are generally healthy and fodder is sufficient except in parts of the southeast where cattle are suffering for want of it. Prices of wheat range between normal and warning rates and of other food grains between warning and scarcity rates.

North-West Frontier Province.—Rain fell in parts of all districts except Dera Ismail Khan. The condition of crops is fairly good on irrigated areas and average on unirrigated lands excepting those lately damaged by hail in Bannu. Harvesting of wheat and barley continues and the outturn is normal. Rice and turmeric are being sown in Bannu. The condition of cattle is on the whole good though disease is reported from two villages of the Bannu tahsil. Fodder and water are sufficient. Prices are stationary with a slight tendency to fall in Peshawar. The public health is generally good.

Jammu.—Slight rain fell during the week. Prices are fluctuating. Wheat sells from 10 to 15 and maize from 14 to 21 seers per rupee. The condition of standing crops is fair. There is no disease among cattle. Fodder is sufficient.

Kashmir.—Good rain fell during the week and was beneficial to crops which were damaged slightly by a hailstorm in Baramula. Agricultural operations for autumn crops are in progress. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are rising in Baramula and are normal elsewhere. The prospects of the spring harvest are good. Water and fodder are sufficient.

Rajputana.—The rainfall during the week was more or less general. The weather was hot and cloudy. Land is being prepared for sowing of autumn crops. The condition of cattle is generally fair but they are weak in parts of eastern and central Rajputana and also in Marwar and Mewar where fodder is insufficient. Fodder is also scarce in Ajmer-Merwara and in parts of Haraoti. Some sporadic cattle disease is reported. Prices are generally high and stationary. The numbers on gratuitous relief were:—Ajmer 15 and Merwara 90.

Central India.—The rainfall was general in Bhopal, Bundelkhand, Malwa and the southern States. Slight rain fell in Indore and nil elsewhere. Scarcity of drinking water is felt in the Sunel, Garoth and Rampura mahals of Indore. Preparation of land for autumn crops is in progress in Gwalior, Bhopal, Bundelkhand, Malwa and the southern States and has been completed in Indore. Cattle disease continues in parts of Gwalior, Indore, Bhopal, Baghelkhand, Bundelkhand and the southern States. Fodder is fair in Bhopal, poor in Baghelkhand and is being imported in Bundelkhand, the Alampur pergana of Indore and in the northern parts of the Gwalior division. Prices are rising in Bhopal and Baghelkhand and in parts of Bundelkhand and are steady elsewhere. In Bundelkhand the average numbers on test works were :—Panna 1,261, Baoni 65, Chhatarpur 232, Sarila 191, Dhurwai 156, Bijna 149, Tori Fatehpur 63, Jigni 168, Lughasi 170, Bihat 344, Beri 120, Naigawan Rebai 42, Bilheri 457, Bijawar 575, Samthar 581, Charkhari 781, Ajaigarh 291, Banka Pahari 97, Alipura 241, Orchha 958, Datia 804 and Garrauli 40. On gratuitous relief the numbers were :—Panna 1,872, Baoni 196, Chhatarpur 528, Sarila 50, Dhurwai 8, Bijna 11, Tori Fatehpur 49, Jigni 53, Lughasi 122, Bihat 160, Beri 23, Naigawan Rebai 25, Bilheri 245, Bijawar 190, Samthar 95, Charkhari 296, Ajaigarh 329, Banka Pahari 5, Alipura 72, Orchha 170, Datia 2,208, Garrauli 49 and Gaurihar 73.

The famine report for the Alampur pergana of Indore has not been received.

Central Provinces.—The weather has been generally hot and cloudy. Light to moderate rain fell in almost all the districts. Preparation of land for autumn crops continues. Sowing of rice has commenced in a few places. Fodder is dear or scarce in parts of twelve districts and water is inadequate in several of those districts. Cattle are generally in good condition. Fluctuations in prices are unimportant.

Feudatory States.—Light to moderate rain fell in nine States, nowhere exceeding 2½ inches. Preparation of land continues. Wheat and gram rose by 2 seers per rupee in Jashpur.

The weekly report on the famine and scarcity is as follows :—The numbers on relief were :—Works nil, gratuitous 9,837. The price basis remains unchanged at 10 seers. There is no change in the distressed area. Distress is small. The increase in the numbers on gratuitous relief is due to greater liberality to village watchmen. The numbers on ordinary works are falling and in all three affected districts people are returning to agricultural occupations. There is no wandering or emaciation. The physical condition of people is satisfactory and relief measures are adequate.

Bombay.—Good rain fell during the week in Ratnagiri, Kanara and East Khandesh, moderate rain in the Upper Sind Frontier, Kaira, West Khandesh, Nasik, Ahmednagar, Kathiawar, Baroda, Palanpur, Savantvadi and Kolhapur and slight rain in Thar and Parkar and in the rest of the Presidency proper. Preparations for autumn crops are progressing. Sowing continues in Sind, Kaira, the Konkan, Belgaum and Savantvadi. The fodder supply is inadequate in Poona, Sholapur and Satara. Grass and kadbi are being imported. Cattle are generally in good condition. Agricultural stock is sufficient except in Ahmednagar, Poona and Cutch. Drinking water is deficient in Nasik, Poona, Sholapur, Satara and the Karnatak. Irrigation water is deficient in Kaira, the Deccan and the Karnatak. Prices are rising. The numbers on gratuitous relief during the week ending 6th June were :—Sholapur, Satara and Bijapur 3,648.

Hyderabad.—Good rain fell in the Aurangabad and Parbhani districts and light and partial rain elsewhere. The average rainfall for the Dominions was 45 cents. Lands are being prepared for autumn crops throughout the Dominions. The late rice crop is being harvested. Fodder scarcity prevails in eleven, water scarcity in thirty-seven and cattle disease in four talukas. Prices :—Wheat 6½, coarse rice 5¾ and jowar 12¾ seers per rupee. White jowar is selling at 12 seers per rupee in Hyderabad City. The highest price in districts is 9 seers in Mahbubnagar and the lowest 19 seers in Bir, Nander and Usmanabad.

Mysore.—The rainfall was fair in Kadur and Shimoga and light elsewhere. Prices of food grains are steady and markets are well supplied. Ploughing and sowing operations are in progress. Prospects of the season are fair to good but more rain is urgently required throughout the State. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder are available.

Coorg.—Rainfall 2 inches. Ploughing for rice continues. Prices of food grains are high. The public health is fair. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Madras.—The rainfall was good to heavy on the west coast and in Ganjam, Pudukottai and the Nilgiris, nil in Banganapalle, Sandur, Cuddapah, Nellore and Chittoor and light to fair elsewhere. Standing crops are fair to good generally but require rain in parts of three districts. Paddy is withering in parts of Bellary. Harvesting of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops is proceeding or ending in parts with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowings of paddy and dry crops and planting of sugarcane are proceeding normally in parts. The condition of cattle is generally good. The water-supply is insufficient for irrigation in parts of most districts. Pasture is scanty in parts of many districts but fodder is generally sufficient. Prices are stationary.

PUBLIC DEBT.

No. 845-F.

THREE-AND-A-HALF PER CENT. LOAN.

His Excellency the Right Honourable the Governor General in Council has resolved to borrow five hundred lakhs of rupees for the public service in the following manner:

2. Promissory Notes will be issued for the said amount in the Form annexed to this Notification, being the form of the notes of the Three-and-a-half Per Cent. Loan of 1900-01, of which loan the notes to be now issued will form a part. All the conditions which apply to notes of the Three-and-a-half Per Cent. Loan of 1900-01, will apply to the notes to be now issued. The interest on the notes of that loan is payable half-yearly on the 30th day of June and the 31st day of December.

Tenders.

3. Tenders for the whole or any part of the said amount of Rs. 5,00,00,000 will be received by the Controller of Currency at the Treasury Buildings, Calcutta, from this date to noon, standard time,* of Friday, the 3rd July 1914. Tenders must be for sums of 100 Rupees or multiples of that sum.

4. Each tender must be addressed, in the form annexed to this Notification, to the Controller of Currency, Calcutta, and enclosed in a closed cover, superscribed "Tender for the Three-and-a-half Per Cent Loan." If the tenderer is not resident in India, he must name an agent resident in India, to whom an allotment-certificate may be issued, if any part of the loan is allotted to such tenderer.

* Noon, standard time, corresponds to 12-24 P.M., Calcutta time.

NOTE (1).—Tenders made in accordance with these instructions will also be received by the Accountants General at Madras and Bombay on account of the Controller of Currency, Calcutta, on the 2nd July and up to noon, standard time,* on the 3rd July: provided that—

(a) they are delivered personally or by clerk or messenger at the Accountant General's Office (where a receipt will be given for them);

(b) they are made on printed forms, to be obtained at the same office or at the local Presidency Bank;

(c) each tender is for not less than Rs. 10,000;

(d) the deposit is either a promissory note or a Treasury Receipt from the local office of the Presidency Bank, or a cheque on a local Bank in favour of the Accountant General;

(e) the amount of the tender is made payable at the place of tender, viz., Madras or Bombay (as the case may be) or in Calcutta;

and the Accountant General will return deposits on non-accepted tenders and will issue allotment-certificates so far as the tenders are payable in Madras or Bombay.

5. The rate at which each tender is made must be specified in rupees or rupees and annas: a tender in which no rate is thus specified, but a subscription is offered in some other terms—as, for example, at the recorded minimum, or at some specified percentage in addition to the recorded minimum, or at the average of the accepted tenders—will be rejected as null and void.

6. The rate at which a tender is made must not contain a fraction of an anna: if a rate containing a fraction of an anna is inserted in any tender, such fraction will be struck out and the tender treated as if the rate did not contain such fraction of an anna.

Deposits.

7. Each tender must be accompanied by a deposit of not less than one-hundredth or, if the tender be for less than Five Lakhs of Rupees, then for not less than one-fiftieth part of the tender. The deposit must be in one of the following forms: (a) a receipt for the amount from the Head Office of the Bank of Bengal, or Madras, or Bombay, or one of their Branches, or from an officer in charge of some Public Treasury, or (b) a cheque drawn in favour of the Controller of Currency on a Bank in Calcutta, Madras or Bombay, or (c) Government Promissory Notes[1] standing in the name of, or endorsed to, the tenderer or the person making the deposit.

[1] It is particularly requested that such Promissory Notes may NOT be endorsed to the Controller of Currency.

8. (a) Deposits, not being promissory notes, will, in the case of accepted tenders, be credited proportionately in part payment of the allotment-certificates issued in respect of the tender, and will bear interest for the purpose of clause 16 below from the date of the opening of tenders. When a tender is not accepted in full, the deposits, when they are not in the form of promissory notes, will be credited as far as possible proportionately in part payment of the allotment-certificates issued in respect of it. If any allotment-certificate is not fully taken up, the deposit credited in respect of it will be forfeited.

(b) Promissory notes deposited in respect of any accepted tender will be held until all the allotment-certificates issued in respect of the tender are paid up, and will, if the allotment-certificates are not fully taken up, be appropriated by the Government and cancelled.

Opening of Tenders.

9. The minimum rate at which tenders will be accepted will be recorded under the signature of the Controller of Currency, and, before the tenders are opened, placed upon the table in a sealed envelope, but will not be declared unless some tender is rejected only because it is below the recorded minimum.

10. Tenders will be opened publicly by the Controller of Currency at the Treasury Buildings, Calcutta, at noon, standard time,* on Friday, the 3rd July next, and those received under the terms of note (1) to clause 4 will be similarly opened by the Accountants General at Madras and Bombay at noon, standard time,* on the same day; but the contents of the tenders will not be disclosed otherwise than as provided in clause 12.

11. Tenders at rates not below the minimum rate will be accepted in the order of the rates tendered, beginning with the highest rate. The amount allotted at the lowest rate at which tenders are accepted will be divided amongst those who have tendered at this rate in proportion, as nearly as may be found convenient, to the amounts of their tenders; provided that no allotment will be issued if the amount distributable on any tender is less than Rs. 100: preference will however be given to small tenders, not exceeding Rs. 2,000, at the lowest accepted rate, such tenders receiving allotments in full as far as possible.

Allotment-Certificates.

12. To each tender (or to his agent) whose tender is accepted in whole or in part, such number of allotment-certificates as may be necessary to make up the aggregate amount allotted to him will be issued by the Controller of Currency[1] as soon as possible after the 3rd July and an alphabetical list of the names of those to whom such allotment-certificates are issued will be posted for general information at the Head Offices of the Banks of Bengal, Madras and Bombay.

[1] For tenders received by the Accountant General at Madras or Bombay, and payable at those places, the Accountant General will issue the allotment-certificates.

13. If the allotment made on any tender is less than Rs. 3,000, then the whole of the allotment-certificates [after credit of the deposit under clause 8 (a)] will be made payable upon the 20th August.

Otherwise, the whole amount of each allotment will be divided into two instalments as follows:—

Instalment I.—As near as convenient to 50 per cent., but not less than 50 per cent., payable upon the 20th July;

Instalment II.—The balance payable upon the 20th August;

and allotment-certificates will be issued for each instalment separately.

But the whole or any part of any accepted tender may be paid at any time after receipt of the allotment-certificates.

The words "as near as convenient" refer to the necessity for making each instalment an exact multiple of Rs. 100.

14. Any allotment-certificates will, on application to the Controller of Currency at Calcutta, be exchanged for an equivalent amount of allotment-certificates of smaller denominations; provided that if any payment (beyond the deposit) is recorded upon the cancelled certificate, it can be taken against, and recorded upon, only one of the certificates issued in exchange.

15. Payment of any allotment-certificate may be made to the account of the Government in the Head Office of the Bank of Bengal, or Madras, or Bombay, or in any Branch of these Banks or into any Public Treasury or Treasuries in India which may be named in the tender in respect of which it was issued. Receipts for such payments will be given by the Banks of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, or their Branches, or by the officers in charge of the Government Treasuries at which payment is made, by enfacement upon the relative certificate.

Issue of Promissory Notes.

16. (a) When any allotment-certificate is fully paid up, the holder will, on presenting it duly receipted at the place where it was paid, obtain from the Public Debt Office, Calcutta, promissory notes of such values as he may desire (each note being in even hundreds and not less than Rs. 100) bearing interest from the 31st December 1914, and he will also receive interest at 3½ per cent. per annum from the dates on which he may have made payment till the 30th December 1914.

* Noon, standard time, corresponds to 12-24 P.M., Calcutta time.

(b) Or he may, at his option, by paying interest at the said rate from the 30th June 1914 to the dates on which he may have made payment, obtain promissory notes as above, bearing interest from the 30th June 1914.

ACCOUNTS AND FINANCE.

PUBLIC DEBT.

The 18th June, 1914.

THREE-AND-A-HALF PER CENT. LOAN.

No. 845-F.—His Excellency the Right Honourable the Governor General in Council has resolved to borrow five hundred lakhs of rupees for the public service in the following manner:

2. Promissory Notes will be issued for the said amount in the Form annexed to this Notification, being the form of the notes of the Three-and-a-half Per Cent. Loan of 1900-01, of which loan the notes to be now issued will form a part. All the conditions which apply to notes of the Three-and-a-half Per Cent. Loan of 1900-01, will apply to the notes to be now issued. The interest on the notes of that loan is payable half-yearly on the 30th day of June and the 31st day of December.

Tenders.

3. Tenders for the whole or any part of the said amount of Rs. 5,00,00,000 will be received by the Controller of Currency at the Treasury Buildings, Calcutta, from this date to noon, standard time,* of Friday, the 3rd July 1914. Tenders must be for sums of 100 Rupees or multiples of that sum.

4. Each tender must be addressed, in the form annexed to this Notification, to the Controller of Currency, Calcutta, and enclosed in a closed cover, superscribed "Tender for the Three-and-a-half Per Cent. Loan". If the tenderer is not resident in India, he must name an agent resident in India, to whom an allotment-certificate may be issued, if any part of the loan is allotted to such tenderer.

NOTE (1).—Tenders made in accordance with these instructions will also be received by the Accountants General at Madras and Bombay on account of the Controller of Currency, Calcutta, on the 2nd July and up to noon, standard time,* on the 3rd July: provided that—

(a) they are delivered personally or by clerk or messenger at the Accountant General's Office (where a receipt will be given for them);

(b) they are made on printed forms, to be obtained at the same office or at the local Presidency Bank;

(c) each tender is for not less than Rs. 10,000;

(d) the deposit is either a promissory note or a Treasury Receipt from the local office of the Presidency Bank, or a cheque on a local Bank in favour of the Accountant General;

(e) the amount of the tender is made payable at the place of tender, viz., Madras or Bombay (as the case may be) or in Calcutta;

and the Accountant General will return deposits on non-accepted tenders and will issue allotment certificates so far as the tenders are payable in Madras or Bombay.

5. The rate at which each tender is made must be specified in rupees or rupees and annas: a tender in which no rate is thus specified, but a subscription is offered in some other terms—as, for example, at the recorded minimum, or at some specified percentage in addition to the recorded minimum, or at the average of the accepted tenders—will be rejected as null and void.

* Noon, standard time, corresponds to 12-24 P.M., Calcutta time.

6. The rate at which a tender is made must not contain a fraction of an anna: if a rate containing a fraction of an anna is inserted in any tender, such fraction will be struck out and the tender treated as if the rate did not contain such fraction of an anna.

Deposits.

7. Each tender must be accompanied by a deposit of not less than one-hundredth or, if the tender be for less than Five Lakhs of Rupees, then for not less than one-fiftieth part of the tender. The deposit must be in one of the following forms: (a) a receipt for the amount from the Head Office of the Bank of Bengal, or Madras, or Bombay, or one of their Branches, or from an officer in charge of some Public Treasury, or (b) a cheque drawn in favour of the Controller of Currency, on a Bank in Calcutta, Madras or Bombay, or (c) Government Promissory Notes[1] standing in the name of, or endorsed to, the tenderer or the person making the deposit.

[1] It is particularly requested that such Promissory Notes may NOT be endorsed to the Controller of Currency.

8. (a) Deposits, not being promissory notes, will, in the case of accepted tenders, be credited proportionately in part payment of the allotment-certificates issued in respect of the tender, and will bear interest for the purpose of clause 16 below from the date of the opening of tenders. When a tender is not accepted in full, the deposits, when they are not in the form of promissory notes, will be credited as far as possible proportionately in part payment of the allotment-certificates issued in respect of it. If any allotment-certificate is not fully taken up, the deposit credited in respect of it will be forfeited.

(b) Promissory notes deposited in respect of any accepted tender will be held until all the allotment-certificates issued in respect of the tender are paid up, and will, if the allotment-certificates are not fully taken up, be appropriated by the Government and cancelled.

Opening of Tenders.

9. The minimum rate at which tenders will be accepted will be recorded under the signature of the Controller of Currency, and, before the tenders are opened, placed upon the table in a sealed envelope, but will not be declared unless some tender is rejected only because it is below the recorded minimum.

10. Tenders will be opened publicly by the Controller of Currency at the Treasury Buildings, Calcutta, at noon, standard time,* on Friday, the 3rd July next, and those received under the terms of note (1) to clause 4 will be similarly opened by the Accountants General at Madras and Bombay at noon, standard time,* on the same day; but the contents of the tenders will not be disclosed otherwise than as provided in clause 12.

11. Tenders at rates not below the minimum rate will be accepted in the order of the rates tendered, beginning with the highest rate. The amount allotted at the lowest rate at which tenders are accepted will be divided amongst those who have tendered at this rate in proportion, as nearly as may be found convenient, to the amounts of their tenders; provided that no allotment will be issued if the amount distributable on any tender is less than Rs. 100: preference will however be given to small tenders, not exceeding Rs. 2,000, at the lowest accepted rate, such tenders receiving allotments in full as far as possible.

Allotment-Certificates.

12. To each tenderer (or to his agent) whose tender is accepted in whole or in part, such number of allotment-certificates as may be necessary to make up the aggregate amount allotted to him will be issued by the Controller of Currency[1] as soon as possible after the 3rd July and an alphabetical list of the names of those to whom such allotment-certificates are issued will be posted for general information at the Head Offices of the Banks of Bengal, Madras and Bombay.

[1] For tenders received by the Accountant General at Madras or Bombay, and payable at those places, the Accountant General will issue the allotment-certificates.

* Noon, standard time, corresponds to 12 21 P.M., Calcutta time.

13. If the allotment made on any tender is less than Rs. 3,000, then the whole of the allotment-certificates [after credit of the deposit under clause 8 (a)] will be made payable upon the 20th August.

Otherwise, the whole amount of each allotment will be divided into two instalments as follows :—

Instalment I.—As near as convenient to 50 per cent., but not less than 50 per cent., payable upon the 20th July;

Instalment II.—The balance payable upon the 20th August;

and allotment-certificates will be issued for each instalment separately.

But the whole or any part of any accepted tender may be paid at any time after receipt of the allotment-certificates.

The words " as near as convenient " refer to the necessity for making each instalment an exact multiple of Rs. 100.

14. Any allotment-certificates will, on application to the Controller of Currency at Calcutta, be exchanged for an equivalent amount of allotment-certificates of smaller denominations; provided that if any payment (beyond the deposit) is recorded upon the cancelled certificate, it can be taken against, and recorded upon, only one of the certificates issued in exchange.

15. Payment of any allotment-certificate may be made to the account of the Government in the Head Office of the Bank of Bengal, or Madras, or Bombay, or in any Branch of these Banks or into any Public Treasury or Treasuries in India which may be named in the tender in respect of which it was issued. Receipts for such payments will be given by the Banks of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, or their Branches, or by the officers in charge of the Government Treasuries at which payment is made, by enfacement upon the relative certificate.

Issue of Promissory Notes.

16. (a) When any allotment-certificate is fully paid up, the holder will, on presenting it duly receipted at the place where it was paid, obtain from the Public Debt Office, Calcutta, promissory notes of such values as he may desire (each note being in even hundreds and not less than Rs. 100) bearing interest from the 31st December 1914, and he will also receive interest at 3½ per cent. per annum from the dates on which he may have made payment till the 30th December 1914.

(b) Or he may, at his option, by paying interest at the said rate from the 30th June 1914 to the dates on which he may have made payment, obtain promissory notes as above, bearing interest from the 30th June 1914.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Rainfall summary for the seven days ending at 8 hrs. on Thursday, the 18th June 1914, based on the Indian Daily Weather Reports of the period.

An area of low pressure and disturbed weather was present during the greater part of the week in the east of the Arabian Sea, but failed to develop into a storm. Although it increased the amount of rainfall in Malabar and south Bombay, it had the effect of confining the rainfall given by the Arabian Sea monsoon current chiefly to the coast districts.

Very little rain fell in Burma, but in Assam there was continuous heavy rainfall which extended into the northern half of Bengal and parts of Bihar during the latter part of the week. During the four days ending at 8 hrs. on the 17th, Cherrapunji recorded 88 inches of rain, of which 35 inches fell in one day. At the close of the week easterly winds had extended through the Gangetic plain into the Punjab, and rain was falling locally in the United Provinces.

2. Burma.—Rainfall was nearly general throughout the week in the extreme north, but weather was dry in the central districts, and with the exception of the 17th, rainfall in Lower Burma was only local.

In Kamrup, agricultural operations have been restricted by continual drought. Ploughing for and sowing of autumn and winter rice, weeding of early rice and jute and sowing, plucking and manufacture of tea are in progress. GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

LAND REVENUE.

RESOLUTION.

Dated Simla, the 17th June 1914.

"If the system of co-operation can be introduced and utilised to the full, I foresee a great and glorious future for the agricultural interests of this country."—His Majesty the King-Emperor, 13th December 1911.

Introductory.

TEN years ago there was nothing beyond a few scattered experiments to indicate the presence of the co-operative movement in India. To-day there are over 12,000 societies with nearly 600,000 members and with a working capital of over five crores of rupees, and co-operation has firmly established itself as a powerful factor in the material and moral welfare of the people. A stage, therefore, appears to have been reached at which an endeavour may suitably be made to review the manner in which this remarkable development has proceeded, and the main principles which have guided it in the past, and should guide it in the future. In this Resolution an attempt will be made to trace the growth of co-operation in India, to indicate the benefits—economic, social, and educational—which the movement, if wisely directed, may be expected to produce, as well as the dangers to be avoided, to describe the main features of the various types of society, to discuss a number of questions of administrative detail, to examine to what extent State aid has been and should be rendered, and, finally, to consider how far, in the every day work of administration, district officers should keep in touch with the movement and utilize this new element in the national life.

Co-operation—credit and other.

2. Economic co-operation is based on the fact that when men are joined together for a common object credit, which was denied to the individual, becomes accessible, and advantages beyond the reach of any member of the group working independently are secured. This principle finds its expression in two distinct methods of association, one of which underlies the system of Co-operative Credit, while the other is the foundation of Co-operative Purchase, Sale, Production and Insurance. In the former several persons combine to furnish a collective guarantee by which they are enabled to secure money at lower rates of interest than they could obtain individually. In the latter a similar combination is made in order to effect economies in the preparation or disposal of produce. The former method of co-operation is generally the simpler and more easily managed; it provides the primary requisites for progress, and it is in a sense the foundation of the other, both in India and in other countries.

To form a credit society in its simplest form all that is legally necessary is for ten or more persons to secure registration. The society on the joint security of its members borrows money, and the money so obtained is lent to such members as are in need of loans. When joint security is offered money can be borrowed by the society at a comparatively low rate of interest, and although the interest charged to members who borrow from the society is fixed at a slightly higher rate it still remains perceptibly lower than that charged in the open market. A society formed for the sale of produce would collect the produce at one place, convey it to market in the most economical manner and obtain better terms by selling to large dealers and not to middlemen. Similarly a society, formed for the purchase of seed would combine the contributions of its members, buy seed at wholesale prices and distribute it to the members at cheap rates.

Origin in India. Act of 1904.

3. Co-operative credit, as an organised system, had its origin in Germany about the middle of the last century. Its beginnings were of the humblest description. Two men, Raiffeisen and Schulze-Delitzsch, started independently about the same time to work out a system of credit on co-operative lines, the former in the main for poor peasants, the latter for artisans and small tradesmen. For a long time progress was slow, but between 1880 and 1890 the movement may be said to have established itself, and from that time forward there has been marked and continuous development. Co-operative credit has, for reasons which need not be detailed here, hitherto failed to gain more than a very small footing in Great Britain, but in Ireland, and in most of the principal countries of Europe, it has now obtained an established position as one of the chief elements in the agricultural and industrial welfare of the people. Proposals have from time to time been made, by Sir William Wedderburn and others, for the establishment in India of banks to supply capital to agriculturists and to free them from the indebtedness caused by usurious rates of interest, but to solve the problem of agricultural indebtedness something more than the creation of cheap and unrestricted credit was required, and, although the possibility of extending the system of co-operative credit to this country had previously been considered, it was not until 1895, when Sir Frederick Nicholson of the Indian Civil Service submitted to the Madras Government a valuable and comprehensive report on the subject, that a real beginning was made. In this report he described the systems of co-operation in force in European countries and examined their applicability to Indian conditions. While it was under consideration, a volume entitled 'People's Banks for Northern India' was published by Mr. Dupernex, I.C.S., and a few small experimental societies were instituted by Mr. Dupernex and other officers in different parts of India. So long, however, as the transactions of these societies were governed by the complicated provisions of the Companies' Act, it was impossible to expect much progress, and a Committee was therefore appointed by Lord Curzon in 1901, under the presidency of Sir Edward Law, to report on the action necessary for the establishment of co-operative societies on a proper footing. The Committee had the benefit of the advice of Mr. Henry Wolff, the leading authority in England on the subject, and as a result of its recommendations a Bill was introduced in the Legislative Council by Sir Denzil Ibbetson and was subsequently passed as Act X of 1904.

Act of 1912.

4. Under the Act of 1904, a simplified form of procedure was prescribed for credit societies and their status was defined. Societies were divided into two classes—'rural' and 'urban',—separate conditions being prescribed in the case of each class in regard to matters such as members' liability and the application of profits, and the business procedure of societies was freed from the elaboration of the Companies' Act. Certain duties were prescribed for societies and their members, and power was given to the Government to exempt them in certain particulars from the operations of the ordinary law. Registrars, with powers under the Act, were appointed in each province, and in two years 800 societies had sprung into existence. The number steadily increased from year to year, and before long the provisions of the law—which were necessarily of an experimental nature only—were found to be in some respects faulty, and in others inadequate. The distinction in treatment between rural and urban societies, for instance, was found in practice to be unnecessary. There was, moreover, no formal recognition of joint or central societies formed of other societies, nor did the Act expressly cover any form of co-operation other than co-operative credit. To remedy these and other minor defects which experience had brought to light, a new Act was passed in 1912 which dealt with co-operation of all kinds, and it is by this Act (No. II of 1912) that co-operation is now regulated in this country.

Rate of progress.

5. The number of societies (including those in the Native States of Mysore and Baroda) has now, according to the latest returns available, risen to 12,324 (of which all but 176 are credit societies) and the number of members to 573,536. There has been a brisk demand for the creation of new societies, and considerable pressure has been put on Registrars to register societies at a more rapid rate than is represented by these figures. They have been flooded with applications for enrolment, and, even where applications were not received, nothing would have been easier than to create new societies, as it were, by beat of drum. The principle on which they have acted in spreading the gospel of co-operation has been to make sure before accepting converts that the matter has been well considered and the new doctrine understood, as one good society is, in the end, better than any number of unsuccessful ones. The failures that have occurred in the cases when this course was not followed, have fully justified the caution with which the numbers have been increased. It is sometimes urged that the movement only touches an infinitesimal proportion of the population, and that, if co-operation is materially to affect the condition of the masses, more rapid progress should be made. But it must be borne in mind that the benefits of the societies are by no means confined to registered members. If 600,000 persons are members, the numbers directly affected, including their families, can scarcely be less than 3 millions, and if we take also into account the general reduction of the rate of interest and similar benefits to outsiders which have followed the spread of the movement, it can fairly be claimed that co-operation has already brought relief to some six millions of people—a very gratifying and indeed phenomenal outcome of the work of ten years. It is true that there is still only one agricultural co-operative society in India for every 20,000 of the population engaged in agriculture, whereas in Italy, for instance, there are 18 and in Germany 52. But the movement in India is only at its beginning, and the progress made in the first stage has been unequalled in any other country. In Germany, the pioneer of co-operative credit, the initial difficulties were immense, and 30 societies represented the fruit of 30 years' effort, while even now, according to the best information available, the number of societies in Germany after another 30 years does not exceed 17,000. In Austria after ten years there were 15 societies and now, after some 60 years, about 12,000. In Russia there are said to be 14,000, in France 4,000, and in Japan 7,000. But, although such rapid progress has been made, the movement, fostered as it has been by the resourceful guidance of the Registrars, has developed naturally and on sound lines, and the aim kept steadily in view has been not the multiplication of societies but rather the restriction of the movement within safe bounds. In the future, now that the first stage has been passed, it is possible that, with the help of federation and increased un-official supervision, the rate of progress may in places safely increase, but the caution and restraint shown in the past is in every way a matter for congratulation.

Economic benefits.

6. The aim of those who form themselves into societies is primarily economic. Their object is to obtain money or the other necessities of production at cheaper rates, or to sell their produce at higher prices than those which prevail in the market to which they would individually resort. If this object can be attained over a considerable portion of India, the result will be of immense economic value. It has, for instance, been calculated that in interest alone the agriculturists of India, by taking loans from co-operative credit societies instead of from the village money-lenders, are even now saving themselves from an absolutely unnecessary burden of at least 20 lakhs of rupees per annum, and there is no reason why in a few years this figure should not multiply itself several times over. The mere saving in interest charges is, however, a part only of the benefits received. With the progress of co-operation and with credit democratised money that has lain rusting in hoards has been produced and placed in deposit; money that would otherwise have lain idle has found a serviceable form of investment; capital that would otherwise have been inaccessible has come into the hands of the agriculturists; old debts have been paid off and old mortgages redeemed, cases being reported in which the debts and mortgages not of individuals only but of whole villages have been cleared off. With freedom from debt and with access to capital on reasonable terms, the agriculturist is enabled to develop his means with better heart and increased resources while the production of hoarded money and its application to the development of the country, coupled with an improvement in the economic position of the people, must result in an increase in their purchasing power and in the expansion of external and internal trade.

Improvement in agriculture.

7. In no direction, is co-operation more full of promise than in the improvement of agriculture. From the first it has enabled cultivators to grapple with the difficulties caused by bad finance and an undeveloped system of rural economy, but during the last two or three years it has begun to show how it can assist them in winning a better living from a reluctant soil and treacherous seasons. In time of need, Government has never been backward in helping the peasant. Loans for the purchase of seed and cattle have been generously given; lenient treatment has hastened recovery from seasonal disasters; and by the greatest gift of all—irrigation—the liability to such disasters has been prevented over large areas. But more helpful than any of these gifts is the teaching which the Agricultural Department is setting before the people. The field, however, is so wide, and the skilled workers so few, that mere departmental efforts can never suffice to bring home to every cultivator the benefits that agricultural science offers. It is here that co-operation has stepped in. It has, in some provinces, provided the means whereby, as each improved variety is perfected and made ready for use, seed can be conveyed from the Government farm to every village over large areas and can be multiplied a thousandfold; it has enabled the purity of the seed to be maintained, and the best price to be secured for the produce; it has placed within reach of the cultivator cheap manure and implements tested and approved by experts; it has supplied to cattle breeders bulls of superior strains for the improvement of the village herds; and it has provided the means by which useful information can be disseminated.

The association of co-operation with agricultural improvements may assume different forms. In one place the co-operative society may perform the functions of an agricultural association; in another agricultural societies or unions may have a separate existence, but may work in the closest touch with the co-operative movement. But wherever agriculture and co-operation have experienced the assistance which each can derive from association with the other, they are fast developing a truly organic connection and there can be little doubt that before many years this will be the case throughout India. It has indeed been stated by outside observers that the efforts of these two departments have made a deeper impression on the life of the people than any of the other measures which Government is engaged in promoting.

Educational value.

8. But these direct economic improvements are not the only benefit which co-operation is conferring on the country. Co-operation has been, in the widest sense of the term, education, both intellectual and moral. When men are associated for business purposes, they feel the need of education. There are tangible reasons for learning to keep accounts, to sign pro-notes, to read pass books and receipts, and knowledge of this kind must lessen the chances of fraud while members who are able to read simple co-operative literature will take a more intelligent interest in their society and in the progress of the movement. Illiteracy is a hindrance to the movement, and just as co-operation leads to a demand for literacy, so literacy encourages the demand for co-operation. The effect of co-operation, however, extends beyond this. It does more than merely provide cheap credit; it encourages thrift. The criterion for admission to a society is a man's character and not his wealth, and, men, when brought together for their common weal and when pledging their common credit, have influenced each other's conduct and advanced each other's interests in ways previously undreamt of in this country. The fact that the members are ultimately responsible for the payment of the debts of each and every member, operates as a powerful check on expenditure on unproductive purposes greater than that absolutely required by public opinion, and marriage expenses have accordingly been curtailed. Drunkards and gamblers have been reformed or excluded from societies. Self-restraint, punctuality, straightforwardness, self-respect, discipline, contentment, and thrift have been encouraged. In some areas litigation has markedly decreased. In others the common funds have been used to start schools, to provide scholarships, to distribute quinine, to provide drinking wells, to clean streets. The impetus of co-operative credit has led on to saving banks, benefit funds and provision for the poor. Those who have first-hand knowledge of co-operative societies are emphatic in their appreciation of the change which the movement is making in the character of the people affected by it, and it is important to bear in mind that co-operation is not merely a device for obtaining cheap money, or for increasing the economic resources of members, but is also a potent educational influence and, as such, is deserving of the warmest support from those who have the welfare of the people at heart. The managing bodies of the societies have frequently been entrusted with the arbitration of disputes and with other duties which belong to the traditional village panchayats, and there is some reason to think that the continuity of aim, and the solidarity of feeling inherent in the movement, may lead to a revival of the corporate village life which has been so weakened by the disintegrating influences of modern times.

Co-operative credit chiefly for small agriculturists.

9. In India, as in Europe, the greatest obstacle to economic progress has been the difficulty of obtaining capital at reasonable interest for peasant agriculture and for small industrial enterprises, and the foundation of the whole structure of co-operation, both in India and in Europe, has been the credit society. The provision of credit for large landowners is a marked feature of co-operation in some European countries, and there are no doubt openings in India, towards which the Registrars of several provinces have already been feeling their way, for organising the credit of the larger landed proprietors. But an organisation of this kind rests on an entirely different footing from that of the ordinary credit society, and it is unnecessary to refer to it further in this Resolution. The Indian Act of 1904 was admittedly intended to encourage 'small and simple credit societies for small and simple folk with simple needs' and these still constitute the vast majority of the societies which have since been instituted. To those not conversant with co-operative ideas the result may often appear trivial The average number of members in a society in this country is 45 only, and the average working capital of a society does not exceed £290, the actual figures in many societies being of course often far smaller than these. There are indeed societies the capital of which is counted in lakhs, but some of them have commenced from petty beginnings of twenty and thirty rupees, and the strength of the co-operative movement rests in a large number of small but strong societies. Some 600 credit societies are concerned with classes and industries other than agricultural, the proportion of such non-agricultural societies being largest in the United Provinces, Bombay and Mysore. These societies are mainly for the benefit of the poorer classes of artisans, weavers for the most part, but others, such as carpenters, blacksmiths, shoemakers, etc., are also represented. Similar societies have been formed for clerks in offices, and they have lately been tried also in regiments in the Indian Army. The great bulk, however, of the twelve thousand credit societies in the country are for the benefit of the agricultural population, and the chief object held in view from the beginning has been to provide reasonable credit for small agriculturists, who represent the backbone of the Indian polity. The problem of agricultural credit has been looked on as more urgent than that of industrial credit, and the efforts of Government have been mainly devoted to the relief of the small agriculturist.

Effect on money-lenders

10. The small agriculturist has hitherto been dependent for his funds on the small money-lender. It cannot be expected that the small money-lender, who takes great risks and who has to make his living, can lend at a low rate of interest. He has in many instances made unfair use of his superior intelligence, speculating as he does in dishonest borrowers he insures himself against loss by making the honest borrower pay, and the evil traditions of past generations of insecurity have probably led to higher rates of interest being charged than are now reasonable. The extension of co-operative credit entails—and is meant to entail—the discouragement of direct dealings between the money-lender and the peasant. So far therefore as the money-lender depends on money-lending for subsistence, he finds the extension of the movement inimical to his interests. He loses some of his customers, and to retain the rest he has to reduce his rates of interest. It is not surprising therefore that he should, in many instances, have placed obstacles in the way of co-operation and, in some cases, even organised combined opposition to it. Cases have indeed been known in which Government servants related to, or sympathetic with, the money-lending classes have in their official capacity obstructed the progress of co-operation, and any cases of this kind when brought to light and proved should be dealt with seriously. But although co-operation must necessarily interfere with the business of the small money-lender there is no reason why he too should not participate in its benefits. In the past he has fulfilled a useful function in the rural economy of the country, and if he accommodates himself to circumstances he will continue to do so in the future. It is to be hoped that he will soon realise, as in many places he has already realised, not only that co-operation has come to stay and that it is useless to oppose it, but also that it has a useful and not unremunerative place in its constitution for all the old local banking agencies. The loan business of co-operative institutions is restricted to particular channels and protected by peculiar safeguards ; it also courts full publicity and should therefore prove attractive to money-lenders and others who have funds to invest. It is always open to the village banker to invest his funds either in the village societies or in one or other of the various central agencies, and these will afford him a scope for investment much less speculative than the traditional banking business of the village, while the increased wealth of the villagers will, in the end, open up many opportunities for the profitable utilization of his capital.

'Reasonable' credit.

11. The object of co-operation is to obtain reasonable credit from reasonable creditors. This is not necessarily cheap credit and the rates of interest which represent reasonable credit vary very widely in different parts of India. A rate which would be considered extraordinarily low in Upper Burma would often be looked on as extortionate in parts of Gujerat and Madras, and it is no part of the functions of co-operation to reduce too rapidly the rates of interest to a uniformly low level throughout India. No doubt, as the movement strengthens, the rates of interest will everywhere tend to fall, and the process is taking place before our eyes. But a debtor who has been accustomed to high rates can only be trained to thrift by gradual relief, and the sudden opening up of facile credit has too often led to his ruin. It is very desirable that societies should be financed to a large extent by local capital, and deposits from members or from the local public cannot be expected at rates markedly lower than are obtainable in other forms of investment in the neighbourhood. If, moreover, money is lent to members of societies at rates much below those prevailing in the area affected, there is the danger that money borrowed by members will be lent out again at higher interest. It is accordingly found that credit is afforded by societies at very different rates in different parts of India, but so long as the credit in its relation to local conditions is reasonable, it cannot be pronounced excessive.

Types of society—Raiffeisen and Schulze-Delitzsch.

12. The principal object of the credit societies being, then, to provide reasonable credit for small agriculturists and small artisans, there are various systems under which societies can be organised to attain this object. Speaking broadly there are two main lines on which societies can be constituted, and these are known by the names of their originators, Raiffeisen and Schulze-Delitzsch. The Raiffeisen societies are mainly for agriculturists and are often spoken of as 'rural banks,' while the Schulze-Delitzsch societies are primarily for artisans and are described as 'people's banks.' There are many points, both of principle and of detail, in which the two classes differ, but three only need be considered here, viz., (i) the area of operations (ii) the liability of members, and (iii) the treatment of profits. In the rural or Raiffeisen banks members are selected from a very limited area, their liability is nearly always unlimited, there are usually no shares (or if there are shares their value is very small), and there is no division of profits. In the people's or Schulze-Delitzsch banks, on the other hand, the operations of the society may cover an extended area, liability is usually limited, and the members have shares and receive fairly high dividends. These are the two main types of society known in Europe, but there are many variations from these types both in Europe and elsewhere. Among these may be mentioned the 'people's banks' of Italy organised by M. Luzzatti somewhat on the lines of the Schulze-Delitzsch societies but with limited liability in all cases and with smaller shares. In India, where societies have been started primarily for agricultural needs, they have, for the most part, conformed to the Raiffeisen type, but European models have not been slavishly copied, and in a new soil, and with new conditions, there has been no hesitation in departing from recognized types; uniformity has not been attempted and one of the most marked features of the Indian system is its elasticity. By frequent conferences among themselves the Registrars have kept in touch with the essential principles of co-operation, and, so long as these principles are maintained, there can be no objection in adopting a considerable diversity of types.

Area of operations.

13. As credit, which is denied to the individual, becomes accessible to the society because the joint security of all its members is offered, each member must be responsible for every other member and this in fact and not merely in name. They must therefore be personally acquainted with one another and be in a position to exercise mutual control in their transactions with the society. It is true there must be no such artificial limitation in membership as would lead to the society becoming a close corporation, but there must be such a limitation as will ensure that the society is based on the principle of mutual responsibility. For this reason it has been found necessary, as a rule, to require that all the members of a society shall be residents of the same village. It is a sound general rule that there should be only one village in a society and only one society in a village. But to this there are exceptions. Where, for instance, a group of villages can conveniently form a co-operative unit they may without objection be served by one co-operative society. Where persons scattered over large areas are for any special reason so thoroughly in touch with one another that they are able and willing to be jointly responsible, the condition of propinquity is not absolute, and the law accordingly allows that members of the same tribe, class, caste or occupation, even if not resident in the same village or group of villages, may become members of the same society. Similarly, it is permissible to have more societies than one in a single village in cases where a village is so large that all the residents are not mutually acquainted, or where a village is so divided from any cause that one set of residents could not be expected to be jointly responsible for another. But the essential principle remains that societies should ordinarily consist of members so closely in touch with one another that they are willing to be, and can be, both in name and in fact, jointly responsible.

It is for a similar reason that the formation of societies in which one or two men of means have associated themselves with a number of poor and ignorant members has often been deprecated. In such cases there is the danger that the bulk of the members will have no common interest and feel no mutual responsibility. So too, where there are borrowers and lenders in the same society, a conflict of interests may easily arise and, for this reason, societies of poor agriculturists will often refuse to allow the local money-lenders to be associated with them. Where, however, the motives of the monied applicant for membership are not open to suspicion, and where it is beyond doubt that he desires to assist the society by actual participation in its work, and that he has identified himself with the interests of the members, there can be no objection whatever to his admission. It may also sometimes be advisable for different classes of artisans, who need credit at different seasons, to join in one society and so supplement each other's wants. But it is a sound general principle that the members of a society should not only come from a restricted area, but should also represent a community of interest, and it is, as a rule, better that outside helpers should lend or deposit rather than purchase shares or lend their names as members.

Form of liability.

14. In the absence of special orders, passed by the Local Government under the Act, the liability of the members of an agricultural credit society in India must by law be unlimited, and, as a matter of fact, this form of liability prevails in practically all such societies in the country. Even among non-agricultural societies, where limited liability is permitted by law, about half the number are on an unlimited basis, and experience has shown that unlimited liability constitutes, as a rule, the only means by which individually poor people with small security to offer can obtain money on reasonable terms. It was at first very doubtful whether the idea of unlimited liability would be accepted by the people, and many experienced persons anticipated insuperable difficulties on this ground alone. The instinct of association, however, is familiar to the Indian mind, and the principle of unlimited liability has been accepted without demur. Unlimited liability is, indeed, better understood in the villages than limited liability, and for rural credit it constitutes the main basis of co-operation in this country. In joint or central societies, of which one of the members is a registered co-operative society, limited liability has been laid down by law as the usual rule, while in the case of urban banks, although a choice is allowed, this form of liability is suitable as there is usually less cohesion among the members and more business faculty.

Shares and profits.

15. The holding of shares and division of profits are contrary to strict Raiffeisen principles. Shares are usually associated with profit-making concerns, and one of their chief purposes is to limit the liability of members; while profit-sharing naturally leads to profit-seeking. Consequently, the policy with regard to co-operation in this country, which is mainly based on Raiffeisen principles, has hitherto discouraged both the holding of shares and the division of profits. But as experience has shown, both in India and in Europe, that societies of too austere a type do not always succeed in attracting members, it has been found necessary, under proper precautions, to depart from the Raiffeisen traditions, and in Madras, for example, societies are based largely on share capital, while a modified system of shares and dividends has been adopted in the Punjab, in the United Provinces, and in Burma. This system is one which was devised to a large extent by the peasants of one of the Punjab districts, and it does not conform strictly to that of any of the types of society known in Europe. Under this system, as practised in the Punjab, each rural society has a share capital which the members subscribe in instalments spread over ten years, members who join the society after the first year being required to pay up such instalments as they would have paid had they joined at the beginning. Until recently members could withdraw their shares after the bank had been in existence for ten years, but a new bye-law has now been introduced making all shares subscribed in future non-returnable. The profit earned on a share is not distributed, but, at the end of ten years, the accumulated profit is, after deducting one quarter for reserve, added to the value of the share, and on the increased share thus formed, a dividend will thereafter be paid. After ten years a society will thus have acquired a capital composed of the shares subscribed together with the profit earned. To this capital will be added each year at least one quarter of the annual profits. The ordinary type of agricultural society in the United Provinces and Burma is now based on somewhat similar lines, and the success attained by co-operative credit in provinces which have introduced shares and a division of profits makes it necessary to adopt a somewhat less rigid attitude towards these methods than has hitherto been the case. There can be no question that it should be one of the first objects of a society to form a capital of its own so as to be, so far as is possible, independent of outside assistance. Deposits—even those of members—are liable to become a source of danger in times of financial stress, and it is clear that the more a society employs money of its own, which cannot be withdrawn, and the less it has to depend on the money of others and on money which can be withdrawn, the stronger will be its position at a time of economic strain. Provided, therefore, that shares do not imply any limitation of the liability of members, they undoubtedly form, together with the reserve fund, a valuable part of the assets of a society. They also offer an incentive to thrift and may very well form a provision against old age or misfortune. Division of profits is a matter which is more open to objection; but, if there be shares, a reasonable dividend may without objection be paid, and it is not altogether logical to refuse a dividend on the shares of members, while allowing them interest on deposits. Rather, the member who puts his money permanently with the society would seem to be more deserving of a reasonable return on it than the member who merely puts it in for a time. The general conclusion appears to be that, in judging whether shares and a division of profits are advisable or not, it is necessary to consider the object for which they are introduced. If the object is the personal gain of the members, or of some of them, both measures are objectionable. But if the object is to increase the permanent resources of the society, and to offer only a moderate incentive to investment, both appear to be legitimate especially when it is remembered that sufficient legislative safeguards exist to prevent abuses. When a share system accompanied by a division of profits has been introduced, the local Government has always the power to check undue profit-making by limiting the number of shares which can be held by a member as well as by limiting the amount of dividend which can be paid. But societies so constituted require to be carefully watched, as it is above all things necessary to ensure that large dividends are not paid and that the mutual benefit of members, which is the primary object of co-operation, is the object kept steadily in view.

Forms of security.

16. So, too, as regards the class of security to be taken from borrowers, the main principles underlying co-operative credit, are the full mutual responsibility of the members and the profitable employment by them of the money they borrow. In all unlimited societies the whole property of the members is ultimately liable for the needs of the society. The security, however, both of the society against its members, and of outsiders against the society, is primarily the character of the members and only in a secondary degree their personal or landed property. A loan to a member is sometimes made on the borrower's personal security only, but it would appear to be more common to demand one or two sureties. The loan of money by societies with unlimited liability on the security of movable property is discouraged by the law, and a local Government may prohibit or restrict the lending of money by a society on the mortgage of immovable property. In practice it is rare to find movables taken in security, and mortgages cover a tenth only of the loans given out. In provinces where there are records of rights in land, the amount of each man's property, and the encumbrances on it, are easily ascertained, so that specific mortgages are less necessary, while in some areas the credit obtainable on mortgage from the outside market is already as cheap as can be obtained from co-operative societies. Where, as is usually the case, the loan secured by mortgage is for a long term, there are objections to locking up capital in a form which is not readily available. There is, however, no absolute rule against mortgages, and in some provinces, such as Madras and Burma, where land has always been pledged, this form of security is frequently resorted to, and the fact that his property is mortgaged serves to emphasize the exclusive liability of a member to his society. Mortgages are useful in areas under new colonization where the borrower has little or no security beyond his land to offer, and they are often employed to release a member from a previous usurious mortgage by the substitution of another to the society on milder terms.

Previous debts.

17. A question is in this connection sometimes raised: should a member be admitted to a society who is not free from outside debts? The only answer that experience admits of being given is that until a member has been freed from outside debts, a society is not performing its full functions, but it is a counsel of perfection to expect that no one shall be admitted as a member unless and until his outside debts have been paid off. There are, of course, extreme cases in which a man is so indebted that there is no hope of his debts ever being cleared off, and in such a case the proper course is to refuse him admission to the society. But there are many cases, including some that at first sight may appear hopeless, in which the societies can do much. The panchayats in charge of societies have in many cases undertaken the part of conciliators, and, by offering immediate payment, have secured considerable remissions of claims from creditors. A full disclosure of existing debts is a necessary preliminary to admission and there is sometimes in practice considerable difficulty in ascertaining the full extent of a member's unsecured debts, but proposals have been put forward for investing the societies with power to call on creditors to file claims by a fixed date on pain of lapse, and if these should be approved, societies will be materially strengthened in dealing with the outstanding debts of their members. It is indeed to co-operation, more than to any other measures, that recourse must now be had in the attempt to solve the difficult problem of rural indebtedness in this country, and co-operation has advantages which most of the schemes put forward with this object do not possess. It is applicable not only to the classes which possess land but also to others. It makes it possible to reduce outstanding debt without extravagant expenditure of public money. And—what is most important of all—it ensures that the debtor, when cleared of debt, shall be put in a way of life which discourages debt and thriftlessness in the future.

Object of loans.

18. Another important matter regarding which doubt has at times been expressed is whether it is justifiable for a society to lend to its members for other than productive purposes. This was considered when legislation was undertaken, and Government has deliberately refrained from placing any restrictions on the objects for which loans are granted. Apart from the fact that it would be impossible to devise any complete check on the expenditure of a loan, or to say from what sources the money spent on any particular object was derived, it would be suicidal for societies to place any absolute prohibition on the grant of loans for unproductive purposes. The society occupies the place previously held by the money-lender, and it must give loans for all purposes for which loans are essential, including any social expenditure required by public opinion, and if it failed to do this, it would only encourage its members to resort to money-lenders. It has been found by experience that members being jointly and severally responsible for one another will take care that the amount spent on social requirements is not in excess of that prescribed by public opinion in the village, and the dictates of the society in such matters are in most cases cheerfully accepted by the borrower. It has indeed been said, and with much truth, that by lending money for ceremonial purposes societies 'close one of the high roads to insolvency'. While, however, loans are granted for non-productive objects it is an almost universal practice for societies to insist in giving a loan that they should be informed of the object for which it is required in order that they may satisfy themselves as to its necessity, and, as a matter of fact, comparatively few loans are taken for unproductive purposes. It is also necessary that when a loan is granted for a particular purpose the society satisfy itself that the money has actually been applied to the object for which it was borrowed.

Concessions to societies.

19. The extent to which societies receive or should receive direct support, financial or administrative, from Government is a matter which is considered below. There are, however, certain methods by which co-operation may legitimately receive indirect assistance. Just as the whole organization has been exempted from the detailed formalities of the ordinary commercial law of Companies, so too it has been found advisable to allow of the remission in certain cases of such charges as stamp duties, income-tax and registration fees. The working of societies is further facilitated by allowing the despatch of their money in some instances through the Government treasury; Government may help by subscribing to co-operative periodicals; it may go further and allow to societies, as it does in the Act, a prior claim on the debtor's property; or it may exempt shares from attachment. But while Government has been anxious to remove unnecessary obstacles from the path of co-operation, it has been no part of its policy to render the movement dependent for its progress on Government tutelage. When, for instance, it is asked—as it frequently has been asked by many earnest supporters of the cause—to allow the societies a special summary procedure for the recovery of their debts in place of the slow and expensive methods of the courts it has withheld its sanction. Although defaults through fraud are exceedingly rare, it would be mistaken kindness to confer upon societies arbitrary powers of recovery, and if in the absence of such powers a society cannot by means of the joint security given and its own moral authority, collect its debts, the failure is due to a careless selection of members in the first instance or to lax management. Whether or not special methods might be justified in the case of recoveries at the time of liquidation, or when suits are brought by central banks against their constituent societies, there can be little doubt that if individual societies could employ such methods in dealing with their members, they would be encouraged to become careless in administration, and to neglect the vital principle that admission should be refused to those who cannot be relied upon to fulfil their obligations.

20. The funds of societies are derived from various sources, and the proportions in which these sources are tapped vary in different parts of India. For agricultural societies generally the four main sources of income are the share capital, the deposits of members, the loans and deposits from non-members, and loans and deposits from other societies, and the percentage of the total working capital represented by each of these heads of income is that indicated in the margin. Leaving out of account the money received from other societies (that is to say in the main from the central societies described in paragraph 23 below) it will be observed that members themselves contribute in the form of shares, loans and deposits about twice as much as outsiders. As indicating the stimulation of thrift this result is, from the co-operative point of view, satisfactory, and it is in some respects better that members should raise their own funds. On the other hand it is a satisfactory test of the progress of a society if it can show that it has enlisted the confidence of the public. The essential point, however, is that funds should be received in such a form that the society will receive adequate warning before they are withdrawn, and from this point of view there are advantages in receiving money in form of shares. Similarly as between deposits, there is an obvious advantage in long term deposits as opposed to those received on short terms or on current account. There is no complete information regarding the ordinary length of term for which loans are given to members by societies in different parts of India, and it would be convenient if in future Registrars would include such data as are available on this subject in their reports. Generally speaking, however, loans, whether made in the first instance for short terms only, or for long periods, are usually repayable after the time of harvest. And just as loans are ordinarily repayable after a harvest, so too the demand for loans is for the most part concentrated into a period corresponding with the commencement of the sowings for the chief harvest of the year, and it is necessary that the system on which deposits are received should accommodate itself so far as possible to these circumstances. To a certain extent this can be done by utilising the credit available from central societies, but it is also necessary that individual societies should provide, so far as possible, that funds may be available when they are most in demand by regulating the ordinary length of term for which deposits are received.

21. The ability and willingness on the part of the members of credit societies to repay loans is a prime factor in the establishment of public confidence in the co-operative movement. Forethought, thrift and business methods are not characteristics of the classes for whose benefit co-operation is intended, and in the early years of the movement it would not have been surprising had the members of credit societies shown shortcomings in the matter of the repayment of their loans. On the whole, however, judging by the results, repayment seems to have been satisfactory, delay being due rather to want of the business habit and to the difficulty experienced by Registrars in laying down a definite system of instalments for repayment than to any desire to shirk obligations. Now that experience has been gained it would be well if, so far as is possible, a definite system of repayments were prescribed. Uncertainty in this matter may lead to carelessness on the part of borrowers, to slackness and partiality in management, and so to the 'eternalization' of loans.

Repayment.

22. As a test of financial stability the importance of the reserve can scarcely be over estimated. It supplies a source of income which may be drawn upon in lean years; it fortifies outside confidence and so attracts deposits; it protects members from money payments under their unlimited liability; it cheapens credit; and, perhaps, most important of all, it binds members together. The law contemplates that at least one-fourth of the profits shall be credited to the reserve fund, but it should by no means be considered necessary or desirable, even in share societies, to restrict the income of the fund to this figure. Stated in the order of their importance profits are available for three main objects, the building up of a reserve, the reduction of the interest demanded from borrowers, and the distribution of dividends to members. Regarding the manner in which the reserve should be employed there has, however, been some difference of opinion. Some hold that the reserve should always be separately invested in a central bank or other outside institution, and that unless this is done it is impossible to obtain the additional outside confidence which it is one of the functions of the reserve to secure. Others contend that so long as a higher rate of interest can be obtained by lending it to members, it is better business to utilize the reserve in the ordinary work of the society, and where, as is the case in some provinces, the margin of interest is large and the reserve fund grows rapidly, the use of the reserve fund in this way enables the society to dispense with outside loans and deposits. In Madras and the Central Provinces the reserve is usually invested separately, while in the other large provinces it is freely used for the ordinary business of the societies. There can be little doubt that though in the earlier stages when working capital is small, the reserve may fairly be used to supplement the working capital, it should be invested when any considerable amount has been accumulated and efforts should be made, as the working capital increases, to conform by degrees more closely to this practice. The agricultural societies in India now possess a reserve of 10 lakhs or $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. of the working capital, but no information is available to show in each province how much of this is separately invested, or what portion of the amount set aside as reserve may have been excluded from the above figure on account of its employment in the ordinary business of the societies. It may be remarked that in the German Raiffeisen banks the reserve constitutes $2\frac{1}{4}$, and in the Schulze-Delitzsch banks $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. of the working capital.

Central societies.

23. As societies increase in number it has been found advisable in India, as in Europe, to group them together for purposes both of control and of finance. By federating themselves under a joint central institution, societies provide themselves with an excellent agency for mutual inspection, and it is a mistake to suppose that inspection by such central agencies, even when no financial control is involved, in any way impairs the independence of the societies. It must, moreover, be recognised that just as members of an individual society obtain increased confidence and credit by mutual control, so too societies are able by combining with one another to obtain a similar increase of confidence and credit. These combinations of societies are classed in the published returns under the generic name of central societies. But they are not constituted on uniform lines throughout the country. Sometimes the combination is for no other purpose than the inspection and extension of the societies, and in such cases it is properly called a Union. Such a Union may have no connection with finance beyond the provision of information to a financing body, or it may, as in Madras, the Central Provinces and Burma, so far extend its functions as to guarantee the security of the societies which constitute it. In some areas, notably in Bihar, the United Provinces and Bengal, the Union both inspects and finances its constituent societies and is then spoken of as a Banking Union. Or again, the central institution may finance only without inspecting, and such a body constitutes a central bank in the more restricted sense of the term. There is no uniform organisation for these financing bodies, as the societies which they support are not uniformly spread over the country; but there is a tendency to group the societies of a tahsil, taluk, sub-division or district under a central financing institution, known either as a central or a district bank. It is a matter of some importance to recognise the right moment in the development of co-operation at which one of these central agencies should be established. A society cannot attain its full measure of usefulness until it is federated with, and assisted in some way by some central agency, but if central banks be started prematurely, they are apt to become mere forcing agencies for the artificial creation of affiliated societies. In India the structure has been built upwards from below, and for this reason it has been found advisable to discourage the formation of scattered societies at long distances from one another and to concentrate the movement, allowing it as much as possible to expand from centres in which it has found a congenial soil. It is gratifying to know that as a result of this policy there are already whole districts in India where there is one co-operative society for every three or four villages.

The formation of central societies was not contemplated in the Act of 1904. It was supposed that the capital for rural credit societies would largely be supplied through the agency of town societies, and even when the central system was started, it was the practice in some areas to treat the constituent societies as branches of the central society rather than as independent though affiliated units. The status of central societies has, however, been fully recognised and provided for in the Act of 1912. These institutions are sometimes constituted with societies only as members, but in many cases individuals also, and in some cases individuals alone, are admitted to membership. They are treated as co-operative societies under the law, but on a basis of limited liability and about half the individual societies in India are now shareholders in central banks, although assistance is also given by some banks to societies which are not shareholders. In some areas it has been advisable to define the liability of the constituent societies by limiting it to some multiple of their shares, and it would possibly be an advantage if this or some similar plan were adopted generally. It would also probably be well if local Governments were, at the present stage, to avail themselves of the permission given by the law to limit the rate of dividend in the case of central societies, so as to prevent any tendency on the part of such banks to subordinate the interests of the constituent societies to their own. It may be objected that societies are at present unduly dependent on these central agencies for their funds, but the system has its advantages. The administration of the central societies, being more on the lines of joint stock business, requires expert management and they have usually opened a connection with outside joint stock institutions by means of deposits or cash accounts. They are themselves largely dependent for funds on shares and debentures, and are thus in a position to provide the individual societies with a fair proportion of funds for long-term loans as well as to allow current credits for current wants. The ideal to be aimed at is that rural societies should raise locally what capital they ordinarily require, and that central banks should make good any deficiency in the supply of local capital. A time no doubt will come when local capital will be the principal source from which funds are derived, but at present the main function of the central banks is to enable individual societies to obtain and consequently to lend out money on easier terms than are available in the open market, and it is in this respect that they are able to give to the societies a marked advantage over the local money-lenders. Under the system of village finance hitherto prevalent in India, the village money-lender has almost always been dependent on his own resources only, and has dealt with a limited clientèle. Apart, therefore, from all other considerations the rates of interest which he charges are considerably higher than those at which a society acting in combination with other societies and working in touch with the general money market of the country can profitably lend money. By bringing the borrower into touch with the outside money market, central societies are fulfilling a new and important function and they provide also the machinery by which the excesses and deficiencies of their constituent societies can be balanced.

Provincial banks.

24. In themselves, however, the central banks cannot completely fulfil this function. Their range is necessarily limited, and they are subject only in a less degree than the individual societies to vicissitudes of season and fluctuations in the demand for money. They in their turn require further agencies from which they can obtain money in the busy months and through which they can utilize it in the slack season. It is possible to some extent to obtain the necessary help by means of loans from or cash credits with large joint stock banks, but by a combination on co-operative principles among the central banks themselves an additional advantage in the way of increased credit is secured. It has, therefore, in several provinces been found necessary to establish banks dealing with an area larger than that covered by the ordinary central bank. In Burma, the business of one of the central banks is so considerable as practically to cover the whole province and to constitute it a provincial institution. Elsewhere, as in Bombay and the Central Provinces, special Provincial Banks have been organised and the establishment of similar institutions in other provinces is probably only a matter of time. The Bombay Bank, which was started in 1911 by a number of prominent men of business in Bombay, may issue shares to the value of 7 lakhs in the first instance. With this fund as a basis of credit it may issue debentures carrying interest at the rate of four per cent. per annum, to an amount not exceeding three times the paid-up-capital and interest at this rate has been guaranteed by the Government of Bombay. The bank lends to co-operative societies only and loans are made to societies direct, more especially in connection with the development of sugar cultivation on the Nira Canal. The Provincial Bank in the Central Provinces was established in 1912 without any official guarantee, and is an institution dealing with central banks only. It has a capital of six lakhs and should prove a useful link between the ordinary commercial banks and the chain of co-operative banks in the Central Provinces, though it has, hitherto, been successful in raising locally its own capital. But although the operations of banks of this kind are confined to a single province, it is obviously opposed to the best interests of the movement that they should compete in attracting deposits, and Registrars might usefully arrange not only that there may be no overlapping in this respect, but also that the excess funds of one bank may be available for use by another. The responsibilities introduced by the addition to the co-operative organisation of central and provincial banks are of a serious character. To supervise the relations of such institutions with the money market on the one hand and with their constituent societies on the other is a task which requires a considerable degree of technical skill and the administration of the whole co-operative movement in the stages above that of the individual society is a matter which must in the immediate future engage the serious attention of Government and of the people.

Inspection and audit.

25. The establishment of these central agencies even in the lower grades has introduced a new business element into the movement, and the administration of co-operative credit must in future present many more difficulties and complexities than in the past. Hitherto the ordinary staff, both official and non-official, has been sufficient for the purposes of inspection and audit, but the question how far special training and expert assistance are required to deal with the larger central institutions and the problems they involve will shortly have to be faced. It is already necessary in the case of some of these institutions to entrust the audit to outside expert agency, but in the main the audit and inspection of societies is carried out by a staff entertained for the purpose either by Government or by the central agencies themselves. In most of the agricultural societies, the local administration is entirely or almost entirely gratuitous; accounts are ordinarily of a very primitive character, and cases have indeed been known where, in the absence of literate assistance on the spot, accounts have been prepared by the inspecting staff. Even in the less primitive associations the duties of inspection and audit are not regularly differentiated, and both of these duties have usually to be combined with the task of answering enquiries from outside and extending knowledge of the principles of co-operation. The staff is at present a small one —from 200 to 300 in all—but its duties are of great and increasing importance, as it is upon close inspection and trustworthy audit that the success of co-operation must largely depend.

Forms of co-operation other than credit.

26. The above considerations, though intended primarily to apply to credit societies, are largely applicable to other forms of co-operation. Societies other than credit societies were first formally recognised by the Act of 1912, and there has not yet been time for any great development of this form of co-operation. According to the latest data, there are now in India some 170 non-credit societies, of which about half are agricultural in character, and they have been formed in order to secure for the humbler classes of the community those advantages in industry and agriculture which the masters of capital derive from the organization of labour, the use of costly machinery, and the economies of business when carried out on a large scale. The management of such societies, dealing as they do with the sale and purchase of articles and the insurance of animals and produce, involves a class of problems far more complex and difficult than those which arise in ordinary agricultural credit. Their ultimate importance to the country may be immense, possibly greater even than that of credit institutions, but at present they are in their infancy. They are a necessary corollary to improved credit, but credit is the first essential and until a system of credit has been firmly established in a province, it would be dangerous to encourage too rapid development on other lines. It has indeed been suggested that the establishment of such societies should always be preceded by some kind of agricultural or industrial survey of the economic needs of the people, and the suggestion is worthy of careful consideration. The application to agriculture of this form of co-operation is at present almost entirely confined to Burma, where societies have been started for the production and sale of rice and other crops, or for the insurance of cattle. The latter class of enterprize is one which is attended with special difficulties owing to the absence of reliable data regarding cattle mortality on which the premia can be calculated, and to the very limited extent to which veterinary assistance is available and it has been recognised in Burma that in any system of cattle insurance there must also be some central organization and means for re-insurance in order that local societies may not be ruined by local calamities. In the industrial sphere there has been somewhat greater scope for co-operative societies other than those framed for the improvement of credit, and most of these are societies for the purchase or for the purchase and sale of articles. As in the case of credit, it would appear that the most promising field for industrial co-operation lies in the improvement of the condition of the weaver community, and in some provinces a beginning has been made by establishing societies of handloom weavers who, by joining together, are able to purchase their yarn and to sell their cloth at more favourable rates than are available to an individual workman dealing with a middleman. Other enterprizes have, however, been started in connection with the improvement of sugar production and of milk, the supply of stores and so forth, and the institution of building societies has been a special feature of the co-operative movement in Mysore. In all these directions the people are still feeling their way, and co-operation of the kind is still in an experimental stage. There are, however, two principles which may be laid down as the result of the experience hitherto gained. In the first place it is desirable that the management of each class of work should be kept distinct, either by the establishment of separate societies, or, if that is not feasible, by the appointment of separate sub-committees for each branch of work, separate accounts and separate annual balance sheets being prepared and presented before being incorporated in the general returns of the society. And, secondly, although these societies are meant primarily for the benefit of their own members, it is sometimes advisable to allow non-members to deal with the society, and there are indeed areas where, without an outside clientèle, the operations of the society would be so restricted that it could not have been started with any hope of success. Where, however, a society includes non-members among its customers, it is always open to it to offer more favourable terms to its own members.

Relations of Government to the movement.

27. The relations of Government to the co-operative movement have been criticised from two opposite points of view.

On the one hand, there are some who contend that the movement, beneficent as it is, is essentially one for the people to work out on their own lines and that Government interference at any stage is uncalled for. Whatever limitations, however, may be suitable as regards the assistance of Government in European countries (and in no country is the movement entirely independent of Government aid), it is certain that in India without initiative and help from Government co-operation would still be unknown. Government alone was in a position to supply the knowledge and organization necessary to start the work, and Government alone is able by its association with the movement to create the outside confidence necessary to give it stability. Registrars are not, and are not intended to be, merely registering officers: they are also expected to provide supervision, assistance, counsel, and control. It is not to be imagined that societies will become perfect models of co-operation on formation and it is necessary that Government, through its own and the societies' staff, should continue their co-operative education long after they are registered. Unless a society is co-operative in fact as well as in name—and it can only be so if all its members understand the main principles—it is a fraud on its members and on the public. The fact too that societies, though primarily self-contained and self-governed, are subject to supervision by Government officers, has an important effect in attracting public confidence, and the benefits thus accruing to the country at large fully justify the expenditure of public money on official supervision. Lastly, the co-operative movement by bringing the officers of Government into close touch with the people in economic matters, provides opportunities for developing those closer relations in other respects which it is so desirable to foster.

But just as there are some critics who deprecate Government assistance, so too there are others, both non-official and official, who plead for a far greater degree of Government intervention than has hitherto been permitted. They urge that in order to touch more than the fringe of the population, a far more rapid rate of progress is called for, and that unless the Government staff be largely increased, and unless active measures be taken by Government to propagate the movement, its effect must be small and its progress slow. This too represents a policy which Government has not felt itself at liberty to adopt. Not only is it the case that work done by a large centralized department tends to become mechanical and listless, but the movement must in its essence be a popular one and nothing should be done to weaken the feeling among co-operators that it is based upon self-reliance and independence. Government, therefore, in the best interests of the movement, must not allow co-operation in this country to become an official concern managed by State establishments.

Financial aid—control and audit.

28. The result is that Government has to steer a middle course, and this has been the policy adopted both as regards supervision and financial aid.

So far as financial aid is concerned, there has been intervention on the part of Government, but it has been of the slightest possible character. When co-operation was initiated ten years ago Government was urged to subsidize the new societies liberally and its apparent parsimony was criticized. But the evils of excessive liberality were fortunately foreseen and the restriction of State aid was due not to niggardliness but to the fact that in other countries experience had shown that unrestricted assistance was a dangerous and might be a fatal gift. It was decided, however, as in the early stages there was no immediate prospect of bringing societies into contact with the general money market, that, subject to equivalent contributions from the members, loans might be given within certain limits. But except in one or two provinces, where special reasons for help existed, Registrars have properly discouraged any undue reliance on such assistance, and the proportion of the total capital of societies represented by Government loans now scarcely exceeds 3 per cent. Without these loans many societies would not have come into existence, and in fostering infant societies they have fulfilled a useful purpose, but events have fully proved the wisdom of the policy of avoiding excessive State aid and it is to the adoption of that policy that the inherent strength of the movement is largely due.

So too, as regards the difficult question of control and audit, it is recognised that these duties cannot be left entirely to the private agency of unions and central banks. It is desirable that this non-official agency should be utilized as much as possible and that purely departmental routine in the work of audit and control should be avoided, but the success of the movement would be endangered if this principle were carried out to an extreme. Without some degree of Government supervision Registrars would lose touch with the societies; and the outside public, who depend largely on the information possessed by Registrars, and who value the scrutiny carried out by those on whom they rely, would lose that confidence in the financial position of the societies which it is so essential to maintain. Had this safeguard been neglected, it is doubtful whether societies would have escaped—as fortunately they have almost everywhere escaped—the evil effects of the recent banking crisis in India, and the circumstances attending that crisis indicate that any arrangement which would dispense altogether with Government supervision is impracticable. The audit, moreover, of a group of societies by a central society, whose own credit is bound up with that of the societies dependent on it, will not be accepted by the public as equivalent in value to an audit by an outside agency. It is necessary, therefore, that societies should be controlled and audited by a reliable staff which can keep the Registrar informed of the financial position of the societies, and it is also necessary that the agency employed should be such as will ensure the confidence of the money-lending public. The staff need not be paid by Government, and it is indeed as a rule better that societies should themselves be responsible for the payment of the controlling and auditing staff than that they should be indebted to Government for its services, but whether the staff is paid by the societies or not, it is ordinarily advisable that it should be appointed subject to the approval of the Registrars, and that it should remain under their general control. If by this or any other means the two main conditions above noted are satisfied—first, that Registrars should possess reliable information regarding the financial position of societies, and secondly, that the outside public should have confidence in the control and audit—it is an advantage that the number of Government officials employed should be as small as possible, and every effort has been made to reduce to the lowest figure the agency directly employed by Government.

Attitude of district officers.

29. But while the movement must be essentially a popular one, and while excessive official supervision must be avoided, it by no means follows that Government officials outside the circle of those directly connected with co-operation should hold aloof. It is true that the details of initiation and inspection should be left to the expert agency provided for the purpose, and it is no part of the duty of the district officer to intervene in the internal administration of societies. But as co-operative societies are no longer isolated experiments outside the sphere of district work, and as, beyond the material benefits which they offer, they represent an influence closely connected with the welfare of the people and powerful, now and in the future, for good or evil, the district officer cannot dissociate himself from the movement. On the contrary, a knowledge of co-operative principles and practice has now become as essential as a knowledge of revenue law and it is his duty to maintain the closest touch with societies, not allowing them to languish through want of sympathy or to develop on undesirable lines through want of vigilance. Without in any way becoming an active propagandist he should, personally and not through his subordinates, make himself acquainted with the progress of the movement in his district, encouraging and helping those who have formed themselves into societies, enlisting the interest and support of men of influence and wealth, and assisting with his advice those who seek to avail themselves of the benefits of co-operation. This in no way involves the officialising of co-operation, nor does it trench upon the essential principle that the movement, if it is to succeed, must be a popular one. Rather will it gain in strength by such encouragement and guidance while the more closely the district officer is in touch with societies the more surely will he find to his hand new and valuable agencies to help him in his daily work.

It is for Local Governments to consider to what extent and in what manner use can be made of societies in each province in district administration—how far they can afford a means of ascertaining the real public feeling of the district—how far they can by rendering voluntary aid assist in promoting primary education, rural sanitation and medical relief—in what manner they can be used in times of scarcity and famine or during the prevalence of epidemics, or whether the training afforded by them will lead to the development of a true system of village government.

In these and other ways it may be found possible to utilize the co-operative organisation, and the movement should, if wisely directed, exercise an important influence in promoting the welfare of the people. But although it is still uncertain to what extent, and in what manner, societies may assist in the work of the district, there can be no doubt that a new factor in administration, which cannot be disregarded, has come into being, and that new duties and responsibilities have been thrown upon the district officer.

Official and non-official assistance.

30. Co-operation in India owes much to the devoted efforts of the many officials who have spent much time and thought on the furtherance of the movement, and a special obligation is due to the admirable body of Registrars who in the various provinces have guided the societies through their earlier stages. They have as a rule been picked men. Several of them had prepared themselves for their duties by a special study of co-operation in Europe; and as a body they have applied themselves to their task with splendid energy and equally splendid patience. They have not only effected much by their own efforts, but they have succeeded in eliciting enthusiastic assistance from others, and the movement owes much to the great body of non-official workers who have so ably seconded the efforts of Registrars. Gentlemen of all shades of opinion and creed have come forward to assist not only by making more general a knowledge of the principles of co-operation and of its benefits but also by initiating new societies and by giving unremitting attention to those of which they are themselves members. Help of all kinds has come from every quarter—from commercial firms, from great bankers, from planters, from zamindars, from ryots, from pleaders, from retired Government servants—both European and Indian—from missionary bodies of all denominations, from the Salvation Army and from numerous other classes and associations. The interest which has been aroused in so many quarters, and the zeal which has been shown have added to the strength of the movement, and have been a source of the greatest encouragement to Government and its officers in the initiation of this important experiment. On some few of the unofficial workers Government has been able to bestow special marks of its appreciation, but there are many whose work has not and cannot receive tangible recognition, and who indeed have toiled with a strenuous modesty which looks for no reward beyond the consciousness of having served the best interests of their country. To these, equally with the others, Government, which has these same interests at heart, extends its sincere acknowledgments and thanks.

Summary.

31. The remarkable progress which has been made during the first ten years could not have been foreseen by the most sanguine believer in co-operation. From small beginnings the movement, fostered by the resourceful guidance of Registrars and assisted by a body of non-official workers, has grown rapidly until it now represents an influence vitally affecting a large section of the people. The development which has taken place is all the more striking when it is remembered that excessive State aid has been avoided, and that the aim kept steadily in view has been, not the rapid multiplication of societies, but the restriction of the movement within safe bounds. The policy of restricting State aid within narrow limits has been fully vindicated and has led to an increase of self-reliance and independence, while the caution with which Government has stimulated development has resulted in a natural and healthy growth. The future is full of promise, and although under the influence of federation, and with increased unofficial aid and supervision more rapid progress may be expected, the caution and restraint shown in the past should continue.

Co-operation has brought with it a wide circle of benefits, both moral and material, and these benefits are intended primarily and mainly, but by no means exclusively, for the poorer agricultural classes. They are not however confined to societies of any particular type, and a marked feature of the Indian system is its elasticity. So long as the members of the rural society are in touch with one another and have a unity of interest, so long as the principle of unlimited liability is maintained as a leading feature, and so long as precautions are taken to prevent undue importance being attached to the profits of members, there is no necessity to adhere slavishly to any particular type. In the detailed administration of credit societies, there are certain maxims which, subject to the reservations specified in this Resolution, may be said to represent the teachings of our experience and some of these are :—

(a) that mortgages as a security for debt, though ordinarily discouraged, are not without their uses in certain cases ;

(b) that the early clearance of a member from previous debts after his admission to a society is desirable ;

(c) that it is unnecessary to confine the grant of loans to those required for productive purposes ;

(d) that while it is desirable that Government should remove certain technical obstacles in the way of co-operation, it would be unwise to grant exceptional concessions as this would remove from the societies the incentive to self-help ;

(e) that while it is impossible to lay down any general rule regarding the comparative importance of the different sources from which the funds of societies are derived, it is essential that the bulk of these funds should be in a form easily realizable ;

(f) that the greatest importance should be attached to the punctual repayments of loans ; and

(g) that while there may be advantages in the earlier stages in using the reserve as part of the working capital of the society, it should gradually, as it becomes more important, be set apart for separate investment.

As societies increase, it has been found necessary to federate them under central banks or corresponding organizations. In some provinces these have again been brought under a Provincial Bank, and the establishment of such banks in all the major provinces is probably only a matter of time. These central institutions bring individual societies into touch with the general money market and serve as distributing centres for their balances. Their management presents special difficulties, and, if co-operation is to be secured against catastrophe, this portion of the organization will require particular attention. It is necessary for similar reasons to insist on adequate inspection and audit of individual societies, and Government, while anxious to secure as much autonomy as possible for the movement, cannot dissociate itself from the task of securing at all times both on financial and on social grounds an efficient degree of supervision. Finally, although district officers need not concern themselves with the details of initiation and inspection, they must recognise that a new factor in district administration has come into being, that new duties and new responsibilities have been thrown upon them, and that the movement, if wisely directed, may form yet another link which binds together Government and the people.

PRESENT:

The King's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

Lord President.

Lord Wimborne.
Mr. Charles Hobhouse.

WHEREAS by Article 13 of the East Africa Order in Council, 1902, the enactments described in the First Schedule to the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, were applied to the East Africa Protectorate, subject as therein mentioned, and for the purpose of such application the High Court of East Africa was substituted for Magistrate or Justice of the Peace of a Colony or British Possession.

And whereas, by an Ordinance of the East Africa Protectorate, shortly entitled the Courts Ordinance, 1907, there were constituted courts with jurisdiction in criminal matters, to be known as subordinate courts of the first, second and third class, and to be held by magistrates as in the said Ordinance provided.

An whereas it is expedient that the powers and duties conferred and imposed by the enactments described in the said schedule on a Magistrate or a Justice of the Peace of a Colony or British Possession should be exercisable by magistrates holding subordinate courts of the first class as provided by the said Ordinance, and duly appointed by the Governor of the East Africa Protectorate in that behalf,

And whereas, by an Order of His late Majesty in Council, dated the 4th day of July, 1908, and made under Section 737 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, His Majesty was pleased to direct that the taking of certain depositions, authorized under certain Acts therein mentioned to be done by or before a British Consular Officer, might be done in the East Africa Protectorate by, or before, the Chief of Customs, and whereas it is expedient to amend the said Order so as to provide that the taking of the said depositions may, in the East Africa Protectorate, be done by, or before, a magistrate holding a subordinate court of the first class, as aforesaid;

Now, therefore, His Majesty, by virtue and in exercise of the powers in this behalf by the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, and Section 737 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, or otherwise in His Majesty vested, is pleased, by and with the advice of His Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows :—

1. This Order may be cited as "The East Africa Order in Council, 1914".

2. Article 13 of the East Africa Order in Council, 1902, is hereby amended by deleting the last fifteen words of the exceptions, adaptations, and modifications contained in paragraph (1) thereof, and substituting therefor the words "and a magistrate holding a subordinate court of the first class constituted under the Courts Ordinance, 1907, of the East Africa Protectorate or any law substituted for, or amending the same, and duly appointed by the Governor in that behalf, for a Magistrate or Justice of the Peace of a Colony or British Possession."

3. In the Schedule to the Order of His late Majesty in Council, dated the 4th day of July, 1908, and providing for the exercise in various British Protectorates of the powers of a British Consular Officer under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, as applied by Section 7 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the words "The Chief of Customs" shall be omitted, and the following words substituted, namely: "A magistrate holding a subordinate court of the first class constituted under the Courts Ordinance, 1907, of the East Africa Protectorate or any law substituted for, or amending the same, and duly appointed, by the Governor in that behalf".

4. This Order shall be published in the Official Gazette of the East Africa Protectorate, and shall thereupon commence and come into operation.

And the Right Honourable Lewis Harcourt, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, is to give the necessary directions herein.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Rainfall summary for the seven days ending at 8 hrs. on Thursday, the 25th June 1914, based on the Indian Daily Weather Reports of the period.

1. Weather was disturbed during the week in both the east of the Arabian Sea and the north of the Bay. The disturbance in the Arabian Sea disappeared on the 22nd, but an area of low pressure passed westwards along the Mekran Coast and caused an extension of monsoon rainfall into Baluchistan. The disturbance at the head of the Bay took several days to develop into a storm, and during its development the monsoon withdrew from northeast India, where weather was practically dry during the greater part of the week. The storm crossed the coast near Gopalpur on the 24th and was shown in the southeast of the Central Provinces on the morning of the 25th. It caused some heavy rain in the northeast of the Peninsula.

2. Burma.—Nearly general rain fell in Lower Burma throughout the week, and in Upper Burma on the 21st and 22nd.

Northeast India, including Orissa.—Practically no rain occurred in Assam, and in the rest of the division rainfall was confined chiefly to the southern districts. It was nearly general in south Bengal on the 18th and 24th, in Orissa on the 18th, 23rd and 24th, and in Chota Nagpur on the 18th.

The United Provinces, Central India and the Central Provinces.—Rain fell locally in the United Provinces, chiefly in the western districts, and in Central India West. It was nearly general on the 22nd and 23rd in Central India East, and on the 23rd in the Central Provinces.

Northwest India.—There was nearly general rain on the 22nd in Gujarat, and on the 24th in east Rajputana. Local rainfall occurred in the east and north Punjab, the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan, lower Sind and west Rajputana.

The Peninsula.—Only a few falls of rain occurred in the Bombay Deccan, southeast Madras, the Madras Deccan and Mysore. Rainfall was nearly general every day on the west coast, on the 19th, 20th, 21st and 24th in north Hyderabad, on the 24th in south Hyderabad, and on the 21st on the north Madras coast.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 20th June 1914.

Burma.—The rainfall was normal and well distributed in the wet zone. Good falls are reported to have been received in the dry zone. Ploughing and sowing of nurseries and of broadcast winter rice are progressing. Sowing of sesamum, cotton, groundnut and peas proceeds normally in the dry zone. The condition of standing crops is good. The health of cattle is satisfactory. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon is steady and above normal.

Assam.—Heavy rain fell in the Surma Valley and in parts of the Brahmaputra Valley followed by floods in the Sunamganj subdivision of Sylhet which caused some damage to the rice and jute crops bordering on the hills. Plucking of tea, ploughing for early broadcast and transplanted winter rice, sowing of winter rice and planting of sugar-cane are in progress. Harvesting of early rice and jute on low lands in Goalpara and of early rice in the Garo Hills has commenced. Prospects of tea and other standing crops are fair to good. The average price of common rice has risen by 2 per cent. Cattle disease is reported from three districts.

Bengal.—During the week general rain fell nearly throughout the Province. The fall was heavy in Jalpaiguri and Chittagong but moderate elsewhere. Ploughing for winter rice and weeding of autumn paddy and jute are nearly finished. Sowing of winter rice in nurseries is going on briskly and transplantation has begun in places. Prospects of standing crops are fairly good. Cattle disease is reported from nine districts. The average price of common rice remains stationary as compared with that of the previous week.

Bihar and Orissa.—Light rain was general over the Province. Sowing of autumn crops is in progress. Standing crops are doing well. The average price of common rice has remained almost stationary as compared with that of the previous week. The supply of fodder and water is sufficient. Cattle disease is reported from several districts. Agricultural prospects in the Feudatory States of Orissa are on the whole good.

United Provinces.—General rain has fallen throughout the Provinces but more rain is wanted. Preparation of land for autumn crops and sowing of cotton and of fodder crops are in progress. Sowing of autumn crops continues in places. Cattle disease is still reported from about one-third of the Provinces. Scarcity of fodder continues but Government hay is being taken freely for agricultural cattle which are in fair condition. Prices show a slight downward tendency in the east of the Provinces; elsewhere, they are practically stationary.

The weekly report on the famine and scarcity is as follows:—Light rain has fallen throughout the distressed area except in the Moradabad, Bareilly, Budaun, Shahjahanpur and Etawah districts. Rajputana.—The maximum fall of rain was 222 cents in Partabgarh but light and scattered rain was received in other States. Ajmer-Merwara received 19 to 87 cents. The weather is generally hot and cloudy. Autumn sowings are in progress in most places. Cattle are generally fair but are losing condition in parts of eastern and central Rajputana and also in Mewar and Marwar where fodder is insufficient. Fodder is also insufficient in Ajmer-Merwara and parts of Haraoti. Some sporadic cattle disease is reported. Prices are generally high and stationary.
